

LEAGUE PLANK LIKELY TO BE DEBATED ON CONVENTION FLOOR

CONVENTION MEETS AND HEARS REPORTS, ADJOURNS UNTIL TOMORROW AT 11

SIDELIGHTS ON THE BIG SHOW IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, June 8.—Today's most popular pun in the lobbies: "The keynote flattened."

Gov. Lowden paused in a walk down Michigan avenue to speak to a man.

"Talking politics, Governor?" asked a friend.

"Hell, no," replied the choice of Illinois, "that man's got a bull calf I'd like to buy, if he'd only sell it."

"Why a feather to boost the Wood campaign?" is the most common question regarding the red, white and blue feathers that have been distributed by the Wood people. The Johnson people assert that the feathers "were plucked from the goose that laid the golden egg."

The Roosevelt family is well represented in the convention. "Teddy Jr." is in evidence all over the lot, while Mrs. Longworth, the "Princess Alice" of White House days, is here, there, everywhere, greeting her father's old friends. Gowned in black with the Gainsborough type of hat she wore in other days, she is, if anything, a more attractive figure.

The Wood boomers have an argument that seems to impress some of the "black men and brothers" Frank H. Hitchcock failed to corral. "Yes, sir," said one of the race-decked out with Wood button and feathers. "If Mr. Gen. Wood is elected he will send the army South to make the white folks allow our people to vote."

"Is you suah of that?" the negro addressed demanded.

"I suah is," responded the boomer. "Then he'll where 's gets out and hushes me a job right heah in 'il old Chicago if he wine days, is here, there, everywhere, greeting her father's old friends. Gowned in black with the Gainsborough type of hat she wore in other days, she is, if anything, a more attractive figure."

Mrs. Alice Longworth attracted more attention than any woman present at the initial session of the convention. She sat with her husband, Nick, in the jury box just behind the chairman, and smiled and smiled just like T. R. used to.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon showed up early, blossoming as the rose and glad to be present.

William J. Bryan was almost carried away by the fine horns that are being used to accentuate the speakers' voices. He gazed longingly at them as if he were about to burst out into oratory.

Fanny Hurst was present, but her breakfast-a-week husband was not around. Fanny was working and it is presumed that he would have interfered with her art.

Senator Jim Watson had to hurry as he got to the opening session that he could not get his hair cut and nobody needs a trim worse than Jim does.

A professional cheer leader leaped forward on the platform just before Senator Lodge started to speak and proposed three cheers. He got them, at about 2.75 per cent, but when he called for a "tiger" the crowd passed him.

Mayor Bill Thompson gave the boys a treat by swagging through the lobby of the Congress with his white cowboy hat cocked over one eye. He had a band of trained singers with him, who told in verse what a great town this is. If the taxicab drivers don't slow up, they are going to need those singers for a number of funerals.

Bill Flinn of Pittsburgh, who gave Mr. Johnson $5000 for his campaign fund, is here taking his investment out in sightseeing. He is still full of hope, though.

Gifford Pinchot is wearing the slickest wine-colored necktie and tan vest of anybody hereabouts.

Dan O'Leary, who got the late President McKinley into the habit of wearing a carnation, is around. He has worn a carnation every day for 27 years, according to a statement he issued today.

De Valera to Visit San Francisco. CHICAGO, June 9.—Eamon de Valera, President of the "Irish republic," said today that at the conclusion of the Republican convention he would go to San Francisco, and that after the Democratic convention he would go to New York City.

Second Session Adjourns After Hearing Committee Reports and Listening to a Couple of Speeches.

NOMINEE STILL IS A DARK MYSTERY

Leaders Predict No Nomination Will Be Made Before Saturday Because of Fight on Platform.

By the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CONVENTION HALL, CHICAGO, June 9.—The Republican convention, adjourned yesterday under the keynote speech of Senator Lodge, showed signs of life today as Chauncey M. Depew, firm of voice and vigorous of feature despite his 86 years, launched the shafts of his wit and sarcasm at President Wilson and the League of Nations.

The delegates laughed and applauded as the veteran scored the President for going abroad as his own peace commissioner and bringing back the League of Nations. It is a frequently recurring theme in this convention, that of Wilson's alleged failure at Paris, and it never fails to get a rise out of the delegates.

There was no hitch in the morning's proceedings. Chairman Will Hays, apostle of harmony, could not have shaped the session more nearly to his heart's desire. As yesterday, the prayer was read. The Credentials Committee's report was accepted without a ripple of opposition from the Wood forces, the source from which it might have been expected. Senator Lodge got a sizeable cheer on being made permanent chairman without opposition, and another hearty one when he said that he wouldn't make a speech. Obviously the delegates wanted to shorten the preliminaries and get down to the business of nominating a President.

This same desire to speed up proceedings, for the feet of the delegates are tired and the third rail is gone, was manifest in the motion of Gov. Morrow of Kentucky to limit the reading of the report of the Committee on Rules, that part involving departures from the old rules. The chief innovation announced in this report was made in the interest of the women. They are going to have an assistant secretary of the National Committee.

In the background lurked the fight over the League of Nations plank. Lodge merely announced that the Resolutions Committee had made progress but was not yet ready to report. The delegates knew what that meant, a bitter contest in the committee that has been threatening to spill over into the convention. Nothing remained to be done and the convention adjourned after a couple of informal speeches that put the crowd in good humor.

The platform committee was not ready to report and only sent word that it was making progress.

No Adjournment Until Saturday. The rank and file of convention visitors always like a lot of music and oratory, and this year they are certain to get it. "Saturday noon, at the earliest," is the estimate of leaders, when asked when adjournment may come.

The delay is more attributable to platform difficulties than to uncertainty over a nomination. The word has gone out to give the radicals every chance to present their views and stop any possibility of a charge of steam-rolling, or, as some call it, an "excuse for a bolt."

And until the platform is built there will be no one named to stand on it. The fact that more than half of the delegates are uncommitted has added to the list of nominating speeches. There are three or more candidates in sight for each position. Between these speeches and the platform contests, it would not be surprising if the actual nominations of the ticket would be carried over till Saturday.

OWNER TELLS HOW HE LET 19 MOVIE HOUSES GET AWAY

Harry Koplar's Business Vision Was Blurred by Visit to Broadway and Nothing Was Put in Writing.

"ORDERED OUT OF HIS OWN THEATER"

Declares He Was Told Case Would Be Kept in Court 10 Years While Opponents Collected Receipts.

Harry Koplar of 5511 Pershing avenue, related today to a Post-Dispatch reporter how he came to give possession of 19 motion picture theaters in St. Louis, which he controls, to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation of New York, with nothing in writing to vouchsafe payment of approximately $1,348,000 which he understood he was to get for them—a lapse not in keeping with the sagacity which enabled him in 10 years to build from a 5-cent tent show a personal equity in the 19 theaters of more than $500,000.

He attributes his lapse to the confidence he placed in the ability of Frederick L. Cornwell, an attorney with offices in the La Salle Building, to handle his deal and to a shortening of his business vision by the glare of Broadway lights reflected from the smooth tops of what he regarded as the "biggest toads in the motion picture puddle."

Purchasers Collect Receipts. Koplar now says that he has been able to collect none of the purchase price while the purchasers are collecting the receipts of his theaters, from which he has been excluded by their order. Koplar's difficulties have come to public attention recently by his efforts to regain, by physical force, possession of some of the theaters, which have resulted in a temporary court order restraining him from further similar procedure.

The recital of the events of the deal, which, at its consummation last March, gained attention as the record financial transaction involving the exhibition of motion pictures in St. Louis goes back to the formation by Koplar of the Greater Amusement Co., by which Koplar added the Kings, Pershing, Shenandoah and Junata theaters to his string.

"I owned half the stock in that company," Koplar began. "My brother-in-law, Sam Hamburg of 5100A Kensington avenue, owned the other half. Sam sold one-half of his interest to Cornwell, with whom he was associated in real estate projects. I only knew Cornwell by reputation up to that time. I regarded him as a big man—director in the Chouteau Trust Co., big real estate man. I'd be ashamed to ask a big man like him to put any business deal I was undertaking with him in writing."

"Well, shortly after Cornwell came into the company, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation made a proposal for the purchase of all the theaters of the Greater Amusement Co. corporation, but my own theaters as well. Now, I knew that the Famous Players was buying up motion picture theaters all over the country. I knew that next year, or maybe the next, the Famous Players would have enough theaters so that they would sell films only to their own theaters and that if I didn't get in I would have a bunch of houses and no pictures to show in them. So Cornwell and I went to New York to talk over the proposition."

Let Cornwell Do Talking. "I fact Cornwell and I went to New York three times. We slept together, dined together, wine together, automobile together, saw Broadway together and went to the Famous Players' offices together. That meant, a bitter contest in the committee that has been threatening to spill over into the convention. Nothing remained to be done and the convention adjourned after a couple of informal speeches that put the crowd in good humor."

"I said he make you the biggest motion picture exhibitor in the United States, didn't he, Harry?" Sam Koplar, a brother, who was present, interposed.

"Yes and I ate it up," Harry admitted. "Am I crazy or what? I can't understand this yet. I own a lot of motion picture theaters. I've got no place to hang my hat. Had to rent this room in Hotel Jefferson to have a headquarters."

"Well," Harry continued, "Cornwell made a fourth trip to New York. I wasn't on this trip, but when Cornwell

$475,053 ESTATE TURNED OVER TO L. H. BRINCKWIRTH

Oldest of Three Heirs of Late Louis Brinckwirth, Brewer, Has Just Become of Age and Gets Fortune.

INHERITANCE IN STOCKS AND MONEY

Settlement Made in Probate Court by J. G. Grone and Mercantile Trust Co., the Guardians.

Louis H. Brinckwirth of 3742 West Pine boulevard, who became 21 years old Feb. 25, today formally came into his inheritance as the oldest of the three heirs of the late Louis Brinckwirth, brewer. Under an order issued in the Probate Court, his guardians made over to his account money, securities and other personal property to the inventoried amount of $475,053.12.

The young man was not in court, having left Monday for New York, to sail within a few days for South America. His uncle, John G. Grone, who has been one of his guardians, and with whom he has lived at the West Pine boulevard home, said Brinckwirth expected to return here by next January, and to complete his course in the law department of St. Louis University, where he has been a student for three years. He is unmarried.

Grone said his nephew probably would keep his money invested in good securities, as the elder Brinckwirth had done. He did not know whether the money was to be placed in the Mercantile Trust Co., which acted as co-guardian with Grone. For administering the young man's property for most of the time since the death of his mother, Mrs. Josephine Brinckwirth, in March, 1911, Grone has received $22,934.44, and the trust company has received $11,465.22, the final settlement showed.

Mother Also Dead. Mrs. Brinckwirth survived her husband only about two months. In 1910, she gave $105,000 to benevolence, and the remainder of the estate be divided among the three children, Louis, Henry and Josephine Brinckwirth. Henry will be 21 years old in December, 1922, and Josephine will reach the legal age (for women in property matters) of 18 in December, 1923. Henry is a student in the high school department of St. Louis University, and Josephine is a pupil of Sacred Heart Academy, on Mercantile street.

As Mrs. Brinckwirth neglected to name an executor, Harry Troll, who was then Public Administrator, took charge as administrator of the estate, and as curator of the children. Legal proceedings were brought, and he was removed as administrator, but continued to act as curator. The law permits a minor, on reaching the age of 14, to choose his guardians, and Louis Brinckwirth, in 1912, chose his uncle, Grone, Henry Griesedick Jr. and the Mercantile Trust Co. as his guardians. Henry Brinckwirth, in 1915, exercised the same privilege, choosing Grone, Anton A. Griesedick and the Mercantile as his guardians.

Troll Censured in Case. In a decision denying Troll the right to administer on the estate, the State Supreme Court censured him for his haste in "discharging what he conceived to be his duty" by filing administration proceedings on the day after Mrs. Brinckwirth's death.

At the time of Mrs. Brinckwirth's death, it was supposed that the amount to be divided among the three children would be about $200,000. The division was made at that time, and the property of each child has been held separately since.

11 PERSONS DEAD, 21 BADLY HURT, IN NEW YORK WRECK

Fast Express Crashes Into Rear of Accommodation Passenger in Darkness in Early Morning.

ENGINEER DIES WITH HAND ON THROTTLE

Flagman of Passenger Train, Stopped Because of Trouble, Says Express Crew Ignored Lantern.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., June 8.—Eleven persons were killed and 21 were injured, some of them perhaps fatally, when a fast east-bound American Express special crashed into the rear of an accommodation passenger train on the New York Central two miles west of this city early today.

All but one of those killed were asleep in two Pullmans at the rear of the passenger train. Martin Doyle of Albany, engineer of the express, died at the post.

The passengers killed were: Mrs. Watson H. Bowne, 55, of New York, her 12-year-old grandson, Daniel Crouse, and her 20-month-old granddaughter, Marion Crouse. Six unidentified men.

Nellis M. Crouse, father of the children who were killed, was severely injured with another young daughter.

Make Up of Two Trains. The train on which virtually all the killed and injured were passengers was No. 28, a New York Central passenger train from Buffalo to New York, with two Pullmans, two coaches and baggage and mail cars. The train which crashed into it was a Michigan Central special of 10 cars carrying express for the American Railway Express Co.

The rear car of the passenger train, a Pullman in which 12 passengers were asleep, was split to pieces. Twenty-two people were asleep in the other Pullman. The train had stopped in an open field between Glenville and Scotia, because of a defective water pipe in the engine.

Statement by Flagman. C. Robinson, flagman on the train, gave the following version of the accident:

"I went back 30 car lengths and saw No. 24 coming toward me, and I stayed in the middle of the track as long as I dared. She kept coming and did not blow her whistle. I waved my red lantern and threw the red flag, but she came on and whizzed by, but I didn't see the engineer do anything."

Just before the crash came the fireman on No. 24 leaped from his cab and escaped serious injury, but Doyle, the engineer, was pinned under the wreckage and killed. Rescuers said his hand had to be pried from the throttle.

Engineer Killed on Fiftieth Birthday—Run by Three Signals.

NEW YORK, June 9.—New York Central officials here said that Martin Doyle, engineer of the express that crashed into a passenger train near Schenectady early today had run by three signals in meeting death at his post on his fiftieth birthday.

Railroad officials announced that the block signals had been inspected after the wreck and found to be in working order and set against train No. 34.

BRILLIANT METEOR FALLS IN FIELD AT OKMULGEE, OKLA.

Hundreds in Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas See Blazing Mass Sweep Across Sky.

By the Associated Press. KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 9.—A meteor of intense brilliancy swept across the southwest last night lighted up the skies over several states, and fell a burning mass near Okmulgee, Ok.

The phenomenon, which was seen here, also was witnessed by hundreds of persons in other parts of Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, according to reports received in Kansas City.

At Okmulgee the roads leading to the spot where the meteor fell were clogged with persons in motor cars who went to watch the meteor burn itself out.

C. S. Smith, an astronomy authority at Muskogee, expressed the belief that the meteor was thrown off from a destroyed planet between Jupiter and Mars. It appeared to travel from west to east, Prof. Smith said.

Other persons who saw it declared almost a minute elapsed before the time the meteor appeared until it completed the arc of its travel.

Tulsa, Ok., reported that when it passed over that city the meteor appeared to be within a few hundred yards of the earth, and that the lower and heavier portion was of a greenish blue color, followed by a long wedge-shaped tail. As it approached the earth, the report stated, the head apparently separated into four parts, but remained together as a mass, and that during the last few seconds of the fall, the southern sky was lighted with a blue green flash.

KIDNAPED CHILD'S FATHER COLLAPSES; MOTHER ALSO ILL

All but Three of 30 Letters Demanding Ransom Branded as Fakes.

By the Associated Press. NORRISTOWN, Pa., June 9.—George H. Coughlin, father of 13-month-old Blakeley Coughlin, kidnaped last Wednesday, collapsed yesterday and physicians said last night his condition is serious. Mr. Coughlin also is under the care of physicians.

More than 30 letters demanding ransom for the baby's return have been received. All but three, it was said, have been eliminated as fakes, and of these three it is said to be hard to determine which, if any, is bona fide.

"It is reasonably certain," said Maj. Charles Lenzler, attorney for the family, "that one of the letters was written by the kidnaper, following the insertion in the newspapers that we were willing to pay $5000 ransom and guarantee the abductors immunity if Blakeley was returned unharmed. The kidnaper was not complied with our demand for proof."

"We are concerned only with the return of the baby. If the kidnaper gets in touch with us we give our word of honor that neither the police nor the newspapers will be advised."

Definite news as to whether the baby found in the home of a negro woman in Dallas, Tex., is Blakeley Coughlin is expected today. The photograph of the stolen child was sent to Dallas Sunday.

PENROSE GATHERS HIS FORCES TO NAME KNOX OR SPROUL

Plan Is to Beat Wood With Lowden, Lowden With Johnson, and Johnson With "New" Old Guard.

JOHNSON BELIEVES HE WILL WIN HIS FIGHT ON FLOOR

Californian and His Friends Refuse to Consider Compromise With Those Favoring Reservations--Hitchcock a Cautious General.

By DAVID LAWRENCE, Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, June 9.—As the second day's session of the Republican convention adjourns, two facts stand out significantly:

First, That Frank Hitchcock, even though in control of the Credentials Committee, has not dared to overthrow Lowden delegates, and that the maneuver by which Hitchcock gained control was largely for prestige purposes. The net effect on the totals of Lowden and Wood delegates is slight.

Second, Senator Hiram Johnson refuses to listen to the advice of friends urging him not to make a fight on the League of Nations platform but to let Senator Borah try it out alone. It is pointed out to Johnson that a defeat on the League plank would ruin his chances of nomination, but the California Senator remains obdurate, believing the convention will ultimately support his views on the treaty.

Although former Senator Chauncy Depew is called upon to speak and spends his time ridiculing the League of Nations, the Committee on Platform has found it far from a joke. The disagreement in the committee is just as fundamental as the division in the Senate itself between "irreconcilables" and "reservationists." Indeed, because of it, the convention has had to take adjournment until 11 o'clock tomorrow morning so as to give the Committee on Platform all day and all night if necessary to reach an agreement. The upshot of it all will be a majority and minority report.

Then will come Hiram Johnson's supreme moment. If he carries the convention with him on the League of Nations plank he becomes the logical nominee. But the pro-League people, namely the Lowden and Wood delegates, are at present in control and unless passion and oratory affect them at the psychological moment, Johnson is doomed to defeat on the treaty issue. If he is eliminated on that, the California Senator will have lost all chance for the nomination itself.

Old Guard in Control.

The inside story of what is happening at the national convention is a fascinating battle between masterful politicians. The candidates are only pawns. And the most striking development is that the real "old guard," namely Senator Boies Penrose and his associates in the senatorial group, including former Senator Murray Crane of Massachusetts, have quietly taken charge of the whole situation.

The key to it all lies in the hands of the New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts delegations. The various moves of the last 24 hours indicate that Leonard Wood will be eliminated by a combination of Johnson and Lowden statesmen; then Lowden will be eliminated by a coalition of the same forces, adapted to some extent by the defeated Wood. The final effort to put Hiram Johnson over will be made in all sincerity by the senatorial group, with the full expectation that the rank and file of New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts delegations will decline to accept the California Senator, leaving the field to a dark horse.

The dark horse at this writing would appear to be Philander Knox, if Senator Johnson will agree to run for Vice President, and Gov. Sproul of Pennsylvania, if Senator Johnson refuses to agree.

Credentials Committee.

Considerable of a flurry has followed the brilliant move by which Frank Hitchcock, leader of the Wood forces, secured control of the Credentials Committee. This veteran politician quietly went to work in each delegation three days ago and saw to it that one of his own men was selected by each state to sit on the Credentials Committee.

With a majority of 30 out of 48 members, Hitchcock would be able to unseat many Lowden delegates who had been previously seated by the National Committee. But, while he is worrying Tobias Hertz, the Lowden general, the latter will surely carry the fight to the floor of the convention if Hitchcock does attempt rudely to throw out Lowden delegates.

Nevertheless a blow has been suffered by Hertz and Will Hays, which may affect their prestige in the convention and correspondingly Hitchcock's stock as a leader has gone up. Parallel with the strategy whereby the Wood forces routed the Lowden managers in the credentials committee is another move the significance of which will be apparent as it is unfolded.

Will Hays, who is suspected by the Wood forces of being a friend to Lowden, was deserted by the last moment in his attempt to make State Senator Ogden Mills chairman of the Resolutions Committee, which drafts the platform. That "old guard" veteran, Senator Jim Watson of Indiana, took a fall out of his rival, Will Hays, by rolling Mills overboard with a vote 40 to 3.

Now where did Watson get such an overwhelming majority, and how did Will Hays come to have so little influence in the choice of a chairman of Resolutions Committee? The answer is simply that Frank Hitchcock threw the support of all the Wood delegates on the Resolutions Committee to Senator Watson. Mills had counted on the help of Leonard Wood delegates, but he was beaten by the old guard without trouble. For back of Senator Watson, indeed, back of every Senator in this fight is Senator Penrose of

"Sproul" Is Only a Name to the West—and You Can't Pronounce It at That"

DELEGATES SEEK TO BE EASILY STAMPEDED

Old Timers Cannot Tell How Much Progress Is Being Made in Task of Eliminating "Big Three."

CHANCES OF DARK HORSES IMPROVE

Quiet Leaders Seem to Be Trying Out Hughes Sentiment, and Harding Men Believe Chances Good.

By the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, June 9.—The first day's session of the Republican national convention gave no clear picture of the probable nominees, but it strengthened the impression already set forth in this correspondence—that the delegates are not the sort to be easily stampeded. From the press section one got a picture of row on row of heads, and the dominant color scheme was gray, mingled with the pink of baldness. This was not the crowd of enthusiasts who yelled approval of the Hiram Johnson Monday night speech at the Auditorium Theater, but to all appearances, a set of men (and some women) who will cast their votes after cold calculation. They are veterans, many of them, of the conventions of 1912 and 1916, prepared to launch "demonstrations" for their respective favorites, when the climax is reached in a nominating speech, but promising little to the orator who would move them against their will. At the time of the convention, it is a hard-bitten lot of delegates.

To those delegates and visitors who were expecting some fireworks to compensate for the dullness of the milling about hotel corridors on aching feet, the day's proceedings must have been disappointing.

League of Nations Fight.

Senator Lodge, who made the keynote speech, is not by any means a splinter. Moreover, he gave the affair a cut-and-dried aspect by reading his address. He was interrupted by applause, but rarely, and then only for a few seconds. At the end there was half a minute or so of cheering, but nothing in the nature of a tumult.

Time though the opening was, there is every prospect that the convention is going to be considerably jaded up before the end. Last night there was a rowing not only the fight over the nomination, but a fight over the League of Nations plank in the platform. The fight last night was the first in which the delegates were to be ironed out in a way to suit all the contending factions, along came Murray Crane of Massachusetts, backed by an influential portion of the Eastern delegates, with the demand that the League of Nations, with reservations, should be given specific approval. The platform makers had hoped to appease the Johnson crowd, and at the same time provide a plank on which the reservationists could stand, by a blanket endorsement of the stand of the Republican Senators, a reaffirmation of adherence to the Monroe Doctrine and a slap at the covenant as the President brought it from Paris.

The Crane people wanted something more definite in favor of the league—some out-and-out endorsement of the stand of the Republican Senators who fought not to kill the league, but to get it accepted with reservations. The fight last night in the Resolutions Committee assumed proportions seriously threatening the harmony which Chairman Hays has been praying for. Senator Borah, who represents Johnson on the committee, was described as "fighting mad." The Johnson people generally, seeing in the effort to change the league plank another evidence of a movement to shunt the Californian out of the way, showed signs of depression.

Harding-Hughes-Sprout.

The stock of the various candidates goes up and down. The Harding boom is a little glimmer put into the Harding boom by the word passed out from the inner councils that after the "big three" had been eliminated, Harding would be given his chance to develop his strength in the convention. The Harding folks celebrated by sending a glee club of about 50 members to sing in the hotel ballrooms. They got a big hand in the Congress, where the crowd was so thick in the evening that one had to use football tactics to get through.

Hughes talk flared up. Yes, the same Charles E. Hughes that was defeated for President in 1916. The senatorial clique began to put out "feathers" to find out how Hughes stands. This is the sort of conversation they are making:

"There will be three ballots on Hughes, and then the crowd will fall all short of nomination by more than 100 votes. It will then be seen that neither Wood, Lowden nor Johnson can be nominated. The time for taking stock will have come.

"Why not Hughes? He is a man of impeccable record; he is a great Governor, he is a great constitutional lawyer; next to Elihu Root he is the chief oracle of the Republican party in the East. Beaten by only a few thousand votes in 1916, he took his defeat without a whimper. He was beaten because his campaign was badly managed, and because the Democrats created the false issue, that Wilson kept us out of war, when Wilson knew we were about to get into the war.

"Hughes has all the elements of strength that he had in 1916 and the additional strength derived from his retention as counsel by the mine workers and his appearance for the Socialists of the New York Legislature.

"But," someone objects, "Hughes is a cold man. He doesn't get across to the voters."

"Sproul Rhymes With 'Soul'."

"What we need," is the reply; "is a cold man—a cool, careful man."

Talk of Gov. Sprout died down. It is realized that the name would be hard to "sell" Sprout to the West. To the Western delegates he is but a name, and they don't know how to pronounce that. His name is variously made to rhyme with "soul" or "dole" or "soul."

The fact that less is being heard of Sprout as a candidate does not mean that he is necessarily out of the running. The elder statesmen of the Senatorial contingent at this convention—want the big three rolled and they are casting about in their minds for a candidate. They have thought of both the Pennsylvania Governor and the former Supreme Court Justice, and yesterday the name of the latter happened to be uppermost.

The Lowden drive was continued during the day with unabated vigor. Lowden's strength was evidenced by the refusal of the Credentials Committee to upset the decision of the National Committee on the Georgia contest. This case, which the Illinois governor won over Wood was determined by the result of all the cases involving Wood and Lowden delegates.

Lodge Permanent Chairman.

In the election of Lodge as permanent chairman and of Senator James E. Watson of Indiana as chairman of the Resolutions Committee, the Senatorial clique scored. Senator Madill McCormick of Illinois and Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana had aspired to the convention chairmanship, and Ogden Mills of New York to that of the Resolutions Committee. Mills was regarded as the candidate favored by Will Hays, though Hays denied taking any hand in the fight.

The "elder statesmen" are obviously on the job—and it is they who are the real power in the convention. The fight over the League of Nations plank in the platform was the first in which the delegates were to be ironed out in a way to suit all the contending factions, along came Murray Crane of Massachusetts, backed by an influential portion of the Eastern delegates, with the demand that the League of Nations, with reservations, should be given specific approval. The platform makers had hoped to appease the Johnson crowd, and at the same time provide a plank on which the reservationists could stand, by a blanket endorsement of the stand of the Republican Senators, a reaffirmation of adherence to the Monroe Doctrine and a slap at the covenant as the President brought it from Paris.

The Crane people wanted something more definite in favor of the league—some out-and-out endorsement of the stand of the Republican Senators who fought not to kill the league, but to get it accepted with reservations. The fight last night in the Resolutions Committee assumed proportions seriously threatening the harmony which Chairman Hays has been praying for. Senator Borah, who represents Johnson on the committee, was described as "fighting mad." The Johnson people generally, seeing in the effort to change the league plank another evidence of a movement to shunt the Californian out of the way, showed signs of depression.

Harding-Hughes-Sprout.

The stock of the various candidates goes up and down. The Harding boom is a little glimmer put into the Harding boom by the word passed out from the inner councils that after the "big three" had been eliminated, Harding would be given his chance to develop his strength in the convention. The Harding folks celebrated by sending a glee club of about 50 members to sing in the hotel ballrooms. They got a big hand in the Congress, where the crowd was so thick in the evening that one had to use football tactics to get through.

Hughes talk flared up. Yes, the same Charles E. Hughes that was defeated for President in 1916. The senatorial clique began to put out "feathers" to find out how Hughes stands. This is the sort of conversation they are making:

"There will be three ballots on Hughes, and then the crowd will fall all short of nomination by more than 100 votes. It will then be seen that neither Wood, Lowden nor Johnson can be nominated. The time for taking stock will have come.

"Why not Hughes? He is a man of impeccable record; he is a great Governor, he is a great constitutional lawyer; next to Elihu Root he is the chief oracle of the Republican party in the East. Beaten by only a few thousand votes in 1916, he took his defeat without a whimper. He was beaten because his campaign was badly managed, and because the Democrats created the false issue, that Wilson kept us out of war, when Wilson knew we were about to get into the war.

"Hughes has all the elements of strength that he had in 1916 and the additional strength derived from his retention as counsel by the mine workers and his appearance for the Socialists of the New York Legislature.

"But," someone objects, "Hughes is a cold man. He doesn't get across to the voters."

"Sproul Rhymes With 'Soul'."

"What we need," is the reply; "is a cold man—a cool, careful man."

Talk of Gov. Sprout died down. It is realized that the name would be hard to "sell" Sprout to the West. To the Western delegates he is but a name, and they don't know how to pronounce that. His name is variously made to rhyme with "soul" or "dole" or "soul."

The fact that less is being heard of Sprout as a candidate does not mean that he is necessarily out of the running. The elder statesmen of the Senatorial contingent at this convention—want the big three rolled and they are casting about in their minds for a candidate. They have thought of both the Pennsylvania Governor and the former Supreme Court Justice, and yesterday the name of the latter happened to be uppermost.

The Lowden drive was continued during the day with unabated vigor. Lowden's strength was evidenced by the refusal of the Credentials Committee to upset the decision of the National Committee on the Georgia contest. This case, which the Illinois governor won over Wood was determined by the result of all the cases involving Wood and Lowden delegates.

New York Betting Odds Shorten on Coolidge and Lowden

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 9.—The active betting market has been transferred to Chicago, a few small wagers were placed yesterday in the financial district, the most significant development being a shortening of the odds against Coolidge from 8 to 1 to 5 to 1. In fact, in the late betting some wagers were made as low as 5 to 1.

Johnson was no longer an even money favorite. Bets were made as high as 3 to 1 that he would not be nominated. Practically no Johnson money was offered. The odds were still 4 to 1 that Hughes would not be selected and the opinion was expressed that he would be beaten by Coolidge at the expense of Johnson. Odds against Wood were placed at 3 to 1, unchanged.

Hoover lost popularity in the odds, with money offered at 6 to 1 against him, compared with 8 to 1 Monday. Money was offered against Lowden at 7 to 1, compared with 8 to 1 Monday; 8 to 1 against Knox, 10 to 1 against Sprout, compared with 5 to 1 Monday, and 8 to 1 against Sprout.

No bets were reported on the Democratic party candidates, though even money continued to be quoted on McCadeo.

The speaker's space at 11:20 and he got three cheers, also a tiger.

Dr. John Timothy Stone was today's orator. The convention stood while he offered prayer.

In closing, Bishop Stone led the great audience in the Lord's Prayer. The song leader was immediately on the job, and led the audience in the "Star-Spangled Banner."

They brought out a stout oak table for Chairman Lodge to which he gave a call. He called for the report of the Credentials Committee. Chairman Duffield of New Jersey came to the platform to present it.

The report recommended the changes decided upon at last night's meeting of the committee. Duffield moved the adoption of the report. Robert R. Church of Memphis, who had been unseated by the Credentials Committee, said he would not ask the convention to consider a minority report.

"I know I am entitled to sit," said Church, "but I shall take my fight back to Tennessee."

The report of the Credentials Committee was adopted without dissent and the convention next heard the report of the Committee on Permanent Organization. It was presented by Gov. Morrow of Kentucky, its chairman. As agreed upon, it recommended that the temporary organization be continued.

The convention liked the idea of saving time and escaping another keynote speech and adopted the motion with cheers. Senator Lodge got another demonstration when he moved the adoption of this time as permanent chairman of the convention.

"The best way to show my gratitude to the convention for its action," said Senator Lodge, "will be to tell you that the speaker of the hour in triumph shall win the laurels of the free and the home of the brave."

The convention acknowledged its appreciation of that with more applause.

National Committee Increased.

Paul Howland of Cleveland, O., presented the report of the Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

The report recommended seating delegate representation in the national convention of four delegates—large from each state, one delegate from each congressional district, one additional delegate for each district in which not less than 7000 votes have been cast for a Republican candidate at the last election.

The only new material in the rules, Chairman Howland announced, was an increase in the Executive Committee of the Republican National Committee from 10 to 15 members and a new standing committee.

"Without saying so in expressed terms," he said, "this is to take care of our reinforcements to the Republican party—the ladies."

The understanding is that the additional members of the committee will be the convention's adopted report.

Chairman Long announced he would enforce the rule limiting speakers to five minutes and one speech on the same subject at the same day, unless the convention ordered otherwise.

The Resolutions Committee sent word it could only report progress and was not ready to present a platform yet.

Chairman Lodge asked the convention what it wanted to do in the meanwhile, and there were cries of "Depew, Depew!" from the floor.

Mrs. Hume was on the platform waiting to speak, and she was the honor of first addressing the convention would go to a woman.

Chauncey Depew walked out on the speakers' platform to an accompaniment of applause and cheers.

Chauncey Depew Speaks.

"He needs no introduction to a Republican convention," said Senator Lodge, introducing him.

"Senator Lodge says I'm an old man, but he's mistaken," said Depew. "A man down South who tells you he is old, is a liar. I am a young man and I have a lot to say."

At 11:15 Chairman Lodge arrived on the platform with Chairman Hays. A song leader tried to get the audience to sing the "Long, Long Trail," but had a hard time getting out the verses.

The song leader stripped off his coat, and rolling up his sleeves called for more "paw." He got a little better response and then took a hand at three cheers for the Republican party.

The speaker took the stage at President Wilson's trip to Europe, to the great amusement of the delegates.

Other Presidents, he said, had dealt with foreign nations, but had selected the best brains and men in the country to go and do it.

"When Mr. Wilson went to Europe and the politicians and diplomats said to him, 'what do you want?' he replied: 'I want a League of Nations, a heaven on earth, of which I shall be the recording angel.'"

The convention got a good laugh out of that.

The League of Nations is there and there is no man who can add one word to the description which was given by our chairman, Senator Lodge. As I travel about, man after man comes to me and says: 'I want to have a Democrat out Mr. Wilson has taken away every principle of the Democratic party and I want you to nominate a good man and win.'"

Then there were cries for adjournment and Senator Wadsworth moved that the convention adjourn and meet at 11 a. m. tomorrow. While the adjournment motion was being put, Mayor William Hale Thompson moved the adoption of the report.

Chairman Duffield of New Jersey came to the platform to present it.

Senator as a Keynote Gets Hearers on Their Feet Readily at Finish

Bryan's Rollo Hat Furnishes Hilarious Note, Perhaps Reminding Nebraskan of Boy Orator Days.

By Irvin S. Cobb.

CHICAGO, June 8.—One of the chief joys of covering a story such as this one, is that I, having been hired by the job and not by the month, may say what I please regarding the merits of the proposition as they appear to me, doing so with an absolute disregard for the private convictions and the political slants of the paper which prints my little pieces. It, therefore, results that I, as the reporter, may let my fancy rove wild and free, on the news page, saying things about the affair which the editor on the editorial page may coincidentally or subsequently take deep joy in refuting as utter political heresy.

At the same time, one advantage remains to me—the stuff I write gets to the reader before the stuff he writes does. I shall now proceed for a brief space to make full use of that advantage.

Let us take, for example, the subject of a national convention. You may take almost any national convention of almost any party. Practically all of them share certain common characteristics. Personally I prefer to take the one which started here today as offering a present and a timely and a typical case.

Take the delegates. Most of them have traveled long distances. Defying en route the well-known Pullman or canned tomato of the dining car and the rigors of the Pullman berth, in order to get here. They have come freighted with a sense of responsibility. They are wearing their best clothes. Their bosoms bravely gleam with grand badges. A favored few among them have taken places as dummy members of hand-picked committees. They are weighted beneath the burden of the obligation which rests upon their shoulders; they confer in grave whispers; they manifest a portentious and concerned demeanor. And yet not one delegate in 50 actually has any voice, however puny and piping, in the real deliberations.

There to Sit in Show Window. Unless following a deadlock, the convention should be swept off its feet by a burst of oratory from some unexpected source, unless some unbroken and unbranded maverick coit of a prevalent darkish complexion should lead a stampede, the prospects are that not one delegate in 50 will have an opportunity to express and to record his individual preference for any candidate other than the candidate selected by some one else, and for whom he will obediently cast his vote. He is here to sit in the show window with the rest of the wax works. He is not expected to do anything on his own personal account.

To permit him individually to indulge in any miscellaneous and independent thinking would be dangerous to the plans of the hidden powers, and might entail a perilous strain upon his menial mind. It is in the hands of competent experts, and does not concern him. I inscribe these words on the subject of the Republican national convention. With equal truth I may pen them three weeks hence when he is to vote on the Democratic national convention.

Let us take the dramatic aspects of them after. The carefully prepared and rehearsed theatricalities which the spectator beholds spread before his vision in a convention city is merely a standard device of the concealed stage managers, planned beforehand to furnish a popular spectacle. Any nation's principles could do its work and name its tickets, and, barring unforeseen and unlikely contingencies, could adjourn in 15 hours. The real drama goes on behind the scenes. It is going on behind the scenes, where Uncle Murray Crane, the most noiseless thing that has come out of New England since the maxim silencer was invented, is conferring with Senator Reed Smoot, who taught the boys of Utah how to talk nice, and where over the long distance telephone wires, the cautious voice of Senator Boies Penrose is at intervals saying "Hush, hush, hush."

So far as the public ear is concerned, the audible effects of these invisible and unobtrusive councilings is about as noisy as the sound produced by a streak of moonlight falling upon the surface of a cup of cold, and yet therefrom, sooner or later, the actual fruitage of the convention will almost inevitably issue.

Take the scene when a convention gets under way for its opening session. Pursuing my right of choice I shall take the scene presented today at the Coliseum. There was comedy aplenty, but it was of the unconscious variety, mainly.

Bryan's Little Boy's Hat. To some it may have appeared that the humor started when the cornetist of the official band band struck up the note that the four bars of "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean" clattered as solid as a schmerkeese. Some may think that the funniest spectacle was unwittingly offered by a long line of "buffs" who stood on the right side of the street patting their cooking their complexions to a rich golden oak tone, but to my way of speaking, Mr. William Jennings Bryan's little boy's hat struck the first and foremost note of hilarity.

Mr. Bryan must have been passing a place where they were advertising a cut sale of seasonable wearing apparel for the tiny tots, and, having an eye for a bargain, he dropped in and picked himself out a rollo lid that had been left over from last season.

Perhaps he was trying to recall the happy days when he was the Boy Orator of the Plateau, or was it the boy profligate? Otherwise, his costume, as in customary with him, was chastely that of a prosperous peasant. Constant wearing of a halo has worn his back hair away somewhat; otherwise he looks just as he did four years ago, when I last saw him sitting in the same press row where today he sat.

Mr. Bryan, as you know, goes to all national conventions. He goes to Republican conventions as a reporter and to Democratic conventions as a candidate. It is believed by his friends that he may eventually succeed at one of these two professions, but if I were him I should drop candidating as a calling and go entirely in for reporter work. Somewhat, he seems to have better luck in that field than in the other.

When the New York outfit appeared, Boss Bill Barnes, who weighs 240 on the scales and nearly 200 when he is telling you what his weight is, was closely followed by Sam Koenig, the half portion leader of Manhattan, suggesting the famous old life picture, "Mother Hippo With Young." It was noted that a colored delegate acquired added merit by wearing a white vest. If, in addition to a white vest, he has on gold-rimmed spectacles and carries a cane, it counts him six for game and gives him a chance to turn Jack and go out.

Gets Them on Their Feet. Probably the keynote speech delivered by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge will be mentioned elsewhere in this paper. Senator Lodge is the perfect 36 of the Republican party, but hearing him make keynote speeches in the past undoubtedly inspired the writing of the piece of poetry by somebody entitled, "Oh for a Lodge in Some Vast Wilderness." As a keynoter, he does not exactly sweep his hearers off their feet, but after the first two or three hours, he certainly does get them up on their feet.

However, there was no dangerous pressure at the exits. It was not necessary to raise the cry "women and children first," as was the case four years ago when Senator Harding of Ohio, who has gone into business as a favorite son, was doing the keynoting. That time persons passing the Coliseum thought a fire had broken out inside. But today all escaped without dangerous crowding. The official stenographer who heroically stuck to his post until the end was among the very last to be saved. He was in a state of total exhaustion but at a late hour tonight was reported to be resting quietly and may recover. Hint at the outset of his keynoting Mr. Lodge stated that a solemn moment confronted his party. Overexaggeration is not a fault of the Senator. It was more than solemn, it was downright sad. And it was more than a moment. It lasted for upwards of the longest hour that have passed during the Christian era. A little later he said the Democrats must be "exclusively excused" from the history of the world. The Texas crowd cheered by utterance but two Harvard purists burst into uncontrollable sobbing.

Only one solitary note of novelty to distinguish this opening session from other opening sessions which I have attended was observed. Chairman Will Hays introduced a human treat in the person of an expert professional cheer leader. This talented person pumped up the enthusiasm such as it was, by causing us to give three cheers for Mr. Hays, three cheers for the G. O. P. and finally three cheers for Senator Lodge, but he reached the pinnacle of his genius when he fetched the all up standing of the United States of America. I understand that tomorrow he will make us give three cheers for sunsets.

No information regarding the dispute would be obtained at the office of the manager of the shops. It was said that only a small percentage of the employees had quit work and that it was possible the dispute would be adjusted satisfactorily before the day is over.

"The movement has not yet reached the stage of a real strike," said an attaché of the office. "We will say nothing until we see how it is going to turn out."

To Visit Belgian Benefactors. Mrs. E. C. Knotts and son, Howard Knotts, of Carlisle, Ill. will depart July 1 for Europe and to visit the Belgian family that took care of Howard Knotts, then a Lieutenant, after his escape from a German prison camp.

It seemed to puzzle the convention that Lodge should have been chosen to sound the keynote. Not even Col. Roosevelt could make a Republican convention endorse over Lodge. The country is too big and Lodge is too little aware of its great heart. It

ANCIENT HISTORY COMING IN AGAIN

By CLARK McADAMS.

CHICAGO, June 8.—The more the Republicans debate their dilemma the more do we learn of ancient history. Everybody is raising ancient history for parallels to our own situation, and we have already had mentioned Pertinax, Isocrates and Julianus. Whoever knows the most ancient history and its most familiar with how public office was filled in the past will win for his side. The best historian so far is Senator Borah. He has found the prototypes of all those opposing Senator Johnson in the history of Rome, and it is the history of those countries holds out no trick at all to see in his intimations our own republic going down with every other civilization that failed in wisdom at such a time as the one through which the Republican party is trying to feel its way.

Almost nobody believes that Senator Lodge made a keynote speech. He said nothing of either Greece or Rome, and if he is aware that the history of those countries holds out no trick at all to see in his intimations our own republic going down with every other civilization that failed in wisdom at such a time as the one through which the Republican party is trying to feel its way.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, and probably the best classicist in the convention, is said to be eager to go back even as far as the Old Testament, with those who know so much about these things, but it is scarcely a matter in which the wisdom of his wing of the party serves. It has not been the habit of people like Murray Crane and Reed Smoot to pitch the debate to any such high plane, and if they could be more certain what it is all about they would be better able to say whether the Doctor should go into it. Someone who heard Borah debate the League of Nations before a private club in Chicago recently with Sir Edward Grey, warns the other fellows to stay out of it. He says Borah will eat alive.

It seemed to puzzle the convention that Lodge should have been chosen to sound the keynote. Not even Col. Roosevelt could make a Republican convention endorse over Lodge. The country is too big and Lodge is too little aware of its great heart. It takes great-hearted men to understand that, and no national convention likes any but the great-hearted men. The cold intellect of Lodge, his Bostonese speech, his dapper little figure, his exquisite aloofness and his geographical remoteness, struck the convention odds and left it unresponsive when it was dying to be cheered.

No other national convention that any of us has seen was like this. Not even brass bands and patriotic airs could dispel the blue funk in which this convention was called to order and which grew thicker and thicker as Lodge read his prose poem about dead waves of the sea rolling against that delicate fabric which is our civilization. The truth is that the Republicans are not happy. They thought they were united, and when they got here they discovered they are sadly divided. In opening the convention their national chairman, Will Hays, said they were united, but it was apropos that assurance, we learned of Isocrates, who discouraged trying to make anyone believe what one does not believe one's self.

He also said there would not be any bolt from this convention, and if the convention could have been sure of that it would have lifted the roof. It didn't lift the roof. It only lifted its eyes heavily and wondered if the slim little gentleman in black had not been upturning around the big hotels.

To one who has sat in all these conventions since the Republican party went on the rocks in 1912 it becomes doubtful whether it is ever to be really got back into deep water again. It is only in the flesh that the Progressives have ever returned. They have never come back in the spirit. Most of them talk now precisely as they talked on the two last occasions when the party met here. Johnson and Borah repeated almost word for word, the attack which Roosevelt made against the bosses in 1912, and they did it from the same stage to a bigger crowd. It is not the Democrats who are the trouble. It is the Republicans who are the trouble.

In Alphabet Order. But I will try and describe the first day of the convention in alphabet order. In the first place, we got there about 11 o'clock and got to our seats by knocking down a lot of good reporters and then Mr. Hays introduced the secretary of the National Committee and he read the official summons to the convention out of a book and if that part of the programme had been left out we would of all thought it was a six-day bicycle race.

So then came the prayer and then the band played Dixie and as usual the crowd thought it was the Star Spangled Banner and stood up with their heads bared and then Mr. Hays said he wanted to introduce the temporary chairman Mr. Lodge and it took 2 gentle and a lady ina Sustained Note.

By Ring W. Lardner.

CHICAGO, June 8.—The convention opened today with a prayer by the Episcopal Bishop of Louisville, where they sometimes have races, so I guess I better open this story with a prayer, which is that I hope you like it.

Well, if the Republican nominee lasts as long as the prayer we will be in office at least four years and maybe longer, but, speaking about length, I refer you to the keynote speech of Henry Cabot Lodge and I don't know what key it was in, but I would say it was a sustained note as it started about noon and when we walked out of the convention at 1 o'clock, he was just getting warmed up. The trouble with having Mr. Lodge make a speech is that he is probably the only delegate to the convention that can speak English, and of course the rest of the delegates couldn't understand him and besides they wanted to sleep so Hays's keynote speech will go down in history as a speech that was never heard and if it was heard, it wasn't understood.

But speaking about Sen Lodge, he got up there garbed in a Am coat like he was usher at a wedding, and I looked around at several other delegates and of course the rest of the delegates couldn't understand him and besides they wanted to sleep so Hays's keynote speech will go down in history as a speech that was never heard and if it was heard, it wasn't understood.

So then came the prayer and then the band played Dixie and as usual the crowd thought it was the Star Spangled Banner and stood up with their heads bared and then Mr. Hays said he wanted to introduce the temporary chairman Mr. Lodge and it took 2 gentle and a lady in-

ROLL CALL MADE UP IN ALL-NIGHT COMMITTEE SESSION

Working all night the Credentials Committee completed the permanent roll of the Republican National Convention at 4:30 this morning. Previous rulings on contests by the National Committee were sustained in all but three cases.

In disposing of 103 appeals from the decisions made last week by the National Committee, two delegates were taken from Gov. Lowden—one in Georgia and one in Tennessee—and given to Gen. Wood, but in the Fifth Missouri (Knox) convention, where the National Committee refused to seat any one, the Credentials Committee seated two Lowden men, leaving the standing of the two candidates unchanged.

Looking southward, negro Lowden delegate, was the Tennessee case in which the National Committee was overruled. He was ousted in favor of Charles B. Quinn, white, instructed for Wood. Quinn's counsel declared the Church faction had held the district convention.

Other cases decided early today and completing the roll, all confirmations of the National Committee were sustained. Eleven Lowden delegates from South Carolina seated. The entire Texas delegation, headed by National Committeeman H. E. MacGregor and reported as split up among Wood, Lowden, Johnson and Harding, seated.

The 15 Virginia delegates headed by Representative C. B. Sloop seated. There is probability of further battles on contested seats when the report of the Credentials Committee is laid before the convention. In some cases, including the Tennessee case, efforts to overturn the committee by vote of the convention were planned. As the report does not embody any serious departure from the temporary roll or affect enough votes to make it an important object for supporters of any candidate to override the committee, however, no long struggle was expected.

Fannie Hurst Says World and Husband Are In Chicago

California Delegation Most Conspicuous Lot
Among the Ten Thousand and Are Giving Hiram Johnson All They Have.

By Fannie Hurst.

CHICAGO, June 8.—Where Chicago slinks along dirtily, rather like a whipped cur, behind the white and blue splendor of her lake front, the Coliseum, lacking only a portulaca to complete its feudal frown, lords it over all its surveys.

No matter what it surveys is warehouses smoked to a ripe old meerschaum brown, squalid alleys rotting beneath elevated railways and cobble stone streets that shivered the timbers of the 10,000 sand-paper-throated Americans (and Senator Ibanez) who, with their national consciousness snapping like bunting in the breezes, walked, taxed, illumined, Frueh-headed and footed it down the unlovely byways of lovely Chicago to nominate a chief.

What a day! As blue as if the 10,000 eyes focused on this city today could see through its lucid thinness, directly into a coliseum banked, stacked, jammed and crammed to the rafters for action.

A sight that shoves the Roman coliseum into the one-ring circus class and compared to which an English coronation day is a dramatic school graduating exercise. The Plantagenet kings, one after another of them, were accused of undue coronation expenditures. They must have spent millions in "Plantagenet currency" but I doubt if the entire dynasty stacked together could foot the celluloid collar and celluloid button bill of this one campaign.

At 11 o'clock this morning, to the grinding of 10,000 axes, the be-bagged and be-buttoned concourse rose to its feet and with a thousand in-favor-aye that must have rung down stairs and tickled the drums of the Chinese press, elected Senator Lodge temporary chairman of the seventeenth Republican national convention.

Voice of the People Strong Enough. The voice of the people! It is as elusive as the music of the spheres and only those with an ear attuned can hear it and yet that must have been it this morning heard by the whole ten thousand strong.

The motif of the slums and the boulevard, of capital and labor, of male and female, of greed and idealism, good, bad, black and white. All these are in the shouting voice of the people this morning; primal love of conquest; intoxication of power. They hit the rafters and gave the doves the shock of their broody little lives, the shinned down spinal columns and opened the convention like a champagne.

Working all night the Credentials Committee completed the permanent roll of the Republican National Convention at 4:30 this morning. Previous rulings on contests by the National Committee were sustained in all but three cases.

In disposing of 103 appeals from the decisions made last week by the National Committee, two delegates were taken from Gov. Lowden—one in Georgia and one in Tennessee—and given to Gen. bottle exploding its cork, in a rush of foam all over the place. "Three cheers for America," someone shouted. Again the voice of the people as instinctively and naturally American as the bellowing of elephants who can make their own hear them throughout the jungle places of the world.

That is what the smattering of voting women are up against at this convention, making themselves heard in a jungle of men.

A valiant showing they made this morning. In a wilderness of clipped heads, bald heads, sore heads, dead heads, they stood smartly abreast with the millinery of June voluntarily removed to reveal permanent waves and careful coiffures.

Looking across this vast field of heads, they resembled as much as a war garden, the names of the states stuck in California, North Dakota, Arkansas, Colorado and Kansas, instead of beets, salify, cabbage and Swiss chard.

And most brilliant of all these warring gardens was the California patch. There is no gainsaying that his "native son" refrain can get on one's nerves like a gold ring across a slate, but raise your fur at as you will—there's something in it.

California Delegation Conspicuous. The California delegation at this convention sticks out like a brilliant poppy above the beet tops and cabbage heads.

When Californians want a thing, they see red. They want what they want so keenly and so loudly that every pore of them is like a little mouth, wide open and screaming.

If Hiram Johnson isn't elected it won't be because California didn't burst a blood vessel doing her part. So it was a natural and foregone conclusion that a California woman, Mrs. J. B. Hume of Berkeley, should be chosen to help Senator Lodge open the convention.

Just a "garden variety" woman, she rather aptly styles herself. But she over her horticultural and political value to her party (they say she's a humdinger) she does her back hair more subtly than any woman at the convention.

And there is some highly distracting lack of attention to the convention was convening and finding its chairs with about the agility of a fat man climbing into his center row seat after the curtain is up, occurred to me that in spite of her overwhelming majority in representation, the world and her husband are in Chicago this week.

EADS LOSES SUIT FOR $1250 AGAINST STIFEL

Employment of Persons to Stir Up Political Sentiment "Against Public Policy."

The St. Louis Court of Appeals, in a decision written by Judge Reynolds and handed down yesterday, held that the employment of persons to create sentiment for candidates for office is against public policy and called attention to the fact that the court had previously held that such promises to pay for such services were unlawful.

The decision was in the case of Henry L. Eads, a former member of the State Senate, against Otto F. Stifel, who is a Republican candidate for Congress in the Eleventh District. Eads alleged that Stifel promised to pay him $1400 in 1912 to stir up sentiment among delegates to county and congressional conventions in favor of Eads's candidacy. He charged that Stifel paid him $1100 of the promised $1400 and still owed him a balance of $300.

The case was originally heard by Circuit Judge Taylor, who dismissed it. Eads then appealed to the Court of Appeals. The latter court held that the alleged promise to pay Eads for his services was, legally, void. He might have rendered a legitimate service of advice, the court held, in representing the contested delegates, but the court was unable to separate that service from the other work of stirring sentiment favorable to Eads, and therefore was unable to fix the value of such service.

CAFFERATA CANNOT COLLECT BET

Court of Appeals Decides Against Cafe Owner in Suit for $375.

The St. Louis Court of Appeals yesterday decided that John Caffera, proprietor of a cafe at 1801 Delmar boulevard, cannot collect $375 from Dominic Glinocchio, which he won on a horse race March 25, 1916.

Caffera alleged that he made the wager with Glinocchio on a horse named Rifle Shooter and that Glinocchio failed to pay him. The Court of Appeals decided that the wager was not between Caffera and Glinocchio, but between Caffera and a third party, for whom Glinocchio was merely acting as agent.

IBANEZ LIKENS ACTIONS OF CONVENTION CROWD TO THOSE OF THROUGHS AT BULL FIGHTS

"Most Interesting Spectacle I Ever Saw; Regret I Can't See Democrats, Too," Says Author

Only Gatherings in All the Nations of the World Where the People, Deliberately and Directly and With a Full Regard for Orderly Processes Choose Their Executive.

By V. BLASCO IBANEZ,
The Famous Spanish Author.

Written Especially for the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.
CHICAGO, June 9.—I must confess candidly that I would have been a keenly disappointed man if I had missed the interesting spectacle that Chicago offers with the Republican convention. After witnessing today's session, I regret all the more my inability to stay and attend the Democratic convention to be held in San Francisco. I would have liked to see the two great national parties at their conventions. I am confronted by the thought, perhaps, taken as a whole, the two national gatherings must have many points of contact.

There is no reason why I should meddle in the politics of this country, and I have no desire to do so. As a man who has spent the greater part of his life struggling for the establishment of a Republican form of Government in his own country, and as an old and ardent admirer of the Democratic institutions of the United States, I feel the greatest sympathy, impartially, for all the men who, in both parties and to the best of their ability, try to make their country greater.

A petty minded critic, anxious to find fault without rhyme or reason, might be inclined to point out defects and parade ridiculous details observed by him in the method followed in this country to elect presidential candidate. What human undertaking is free from fault? What institution could escape us if we started to criticize? But human effort must be judged as a whole and by its results.

I affirm that this Republican convention staged today at Chicago is the most interesting and inspiring spectacle I ever had the good fortune of witnessing. I have no doubt that the Democratic convention would also strike another sympathetic chord if I were lucky enough to see it. It is no common sight to watch the leaders of a party, millions strong, gather together to select the man who aspires to direct the destinies of the greatest nation on the face of the earth.

Contrast In Spanish America.
I have attended many presidential conventions in Spanish America—in the real Spanish America—that counts in Argentina, Chile, Uruguay and the other countries that lie at the extreme end of the Southern Continent the procedure is similar to that followed in the United States. The convention moves in an orderly manner. Things are done with respect for law and order. Parties hold regular conventions and elect their candidates. The only difference is that South American parties and their conventions are smaller.

There is, however, another essential difference which I must not forget. South American conventions, although smaller, are more animated and vehement. The orators talk louder. Frequently they forget themselves and use language which calls for an explanation on the field of honor. Once so often the President-elect has to wait until his term of office expires to bring one of his antagonists to trial. That happened not long ago in Uruguay. Occasionally, however, the President grows impatient and resigns his high office to send his seconds to some intolerable opponent, who to attend him and to prove to the world that he, the President, is a man of courage.

High Temperatures Cause Trouble.
Once in a while these spirited and high-tempered Presidents are young blades of 35 or 40. In those republics of South America the youthful and debonaire Chanchoy Depew might find it necessary to cross swords or exchange a pistol shot or two with another youth of his own age.

But aside from these political customs reminiscent of the days when knight-errantry was in flower, we must bear in mind that the aforementioned Spanish-American countries follow quite faithfully American practices in the selection of their presidential candidates.

In other Spanish-American countries presidents are elected regularly, and regularly deposed after election. A military mutiny elects the chief magistrate—this is a labor-saving device which saves the civil population the bother of going to the polls. Take Mexico for instance. The delegates there do not display badges and feathers. No. They go to the convention armed with rifles and a plentiful supply of ammunition. Generals and Colonels will get together, clasp on their belts with their six shooters and extra ammunition, and one will get up and say: "See here, you fellows, we want our partner Obregon for President." And the rest of the country, although it does not take the trouble to go through useless motions of voting, unanimously elects Obregon.

In Europe there are only two elective republics, two nations with a republican form of government that have achieved a permanent status as such—Switzerland and France. Switzerland in reality does not have a President. Its legislative power is wielded by the Federal Council.

Some Anomalies In France.
In France the legislative power is represented by a man and not by a council, but the method of electing president is not democratic. The nation having no direct action in his election. The Deputies and Senators elect the President in France, selecting him from one of the 10 elective bodies. France may have the most eminent statesmen on earth, but unless he happens to be a Deputy or Senator he cannot use his services as the chief magistrate of the republic. Moreover in France presidential elections are held with only six hours of preparation, when the President resigns or dies before the expiration of his term.

The members of the French Parliament generally elect some one whom the country does not want. Personal prejudice counts for much in this. It is unquestionable that if the last presidential election held in France had been a popular affair, Clemenceau would have been elected by an overwhelming majority. But it happened that the electors were the Deputies and Senators, many of whom had old grievances against the "Tiger," and consequently he could not command the necessary majority. Frequently the man who is selected in France to occupy the presidency is unknown to the people. Very rarely, indeed, is he a popular figure, in every way qualified to discharge the duties of the office. Paul Deschanel is one of those rare exceptions.

Curious Case of Sadi Carnot.
More than once the man elected by the French chambers was some one whom nobody remotely considered the day before. The case of Sadi Carnot is justly famous. On the morning of his elevation to the presidency, this man who bore an illustrious name, but was nothing more than a modest engineer, left his house to go to Versailles to take part in the election of the President. That same afternoon his Paris neighbors and his own family were surprised by the shouts of the multitude, and rushed to the windows to see what was the matter. A squadron of cuirassiers was galloping out, and immense crowds were acclaiming a gentleman who sat in a coach between two Generals. Their surprise knew no bounds when they discovered that the "dark horse" Sadi Carnot, a name to conjure with, for the modest engineer was the grandson of the great Carnot of revolutionary fame, called by his countrymen "The Father of Victory."

In addition to his illustrious name, Sadi Carnot had two strong points in his favor—he spoke little and never smiled. In a matter of minutes the engineer found himself nothing less than President of the republic.

Unknown Good as Any Other.
The most interesting thing about these men, these unknown quantities, whose names the country generally has to learn how to spell, is that after they rise to power they turn out to be neither better nor worse than the others who arrive preceded by great fame.

This would seem to show that to be the head of a nation a man does not need a great deal of special grooming.

Moreover, countries imbued with real progressive spirit get along better guided by their own instinct of the fitness of things. They remind me of certain thoroughbred horses that step better when the driver falls asleep and cannot spur them.

I was not surprised at the size of the Coliseum, the profusion of flags or the great electric sounding board and over the speakers' stand. In the eight months I have spent here my eyes have become adapted to the huge proportion of things American.

When I first got here I thought I saw objects through a magnifying glass. Locomotives, automobiles, all seemed larger beyond their natural dimensions. Human beings alone looked normal. My sight has undergone a transformation. When I return to Europe my eyes will have to readjust themselves again to the modest size of that continent.

No, the size of the hall, the large number of delegates and the vast throngs in the galleries did not surprise me in the least. I expected as much on the occasion of selecting a candidate to run for President.

Like Crowds In Bull Rings.
In a way, the public reminded me of the multitudes who in my own country attend bull fights. In their moments of excitement they clapped their hands and shouted, whistled and stamped their feet exactly as the people do at home in the bull rings.

However, at the opening of the session there was a moment of profound religious emotion. I feel these dramatic situations. The most sublime, delegates and aptators began to sing. "The Star Spangled Banner," accompanied by a band. This simple song is one of the most touching hymns I know. As the people sang they waved thousands of flags over their heads. The air seemed to be full of fluttering butterflies, red and white butterflies, spotted with stars.

Then a minister slipped forward and offered a prayer, a moving prayer, invoking the Lord to guide the delegates in their labors.

I felt that I was about to witness something that would have great influence on the destiny of the world. The American people had just lighted its lantern, like Diogenes, and was beginning to look around for a man.

The power that will be entrusted to this man is so enormous that it is almost beyond comprehension. He will be deemed it inconceivable. That man is going to direct the destinies of a nation that is at the same time the greatest industrial and agricultural power of the earth and the possessor of most of the wealth of the world.

Whoever that man may be, general or merchant, professor or captain of industry, the 110,000,000 of human beings who elect him to that high office will follow his lead. And all the sovereigns of the earth, Emperors, Kings, Princes and Presidents, will turn to the White House for inspiration as they formerly turned to the man who ruled at London, Paris and Berlin.

The political center of gravity of the world has moved up. It is located now in Washington, the capital of the United States of America.

Fifty Missing In Ship Explosion.

Kobe, Japan, June 9.—Fifty Japanese seamen were missing after an explosion of gasoline on the steamer Eiraku Maru yesterday. The explosion shook the city like an earthquake and seriously damaged shipping. The Eiraku Maru was destroyed, and the fire spread to a score of gasoline-laden junks, which drifted blazing out to sea, their crews shrieking for help. The American steamer Wytheville, from New York, had one man burned. One million gallons of gasoline originally shipped from America is being shipped to the Kolchak Gov-

BRYAN FINDS LODGE'S SPEECH PRETTY THIN AND EASILY RAVELLED

Marks the Senator's Extreme Caution in Dealing With the League and His Fear to Credit His Party With Prohibition.

By William Jennings Bryan.

(Copyright, 1920, by W. J. Bryan.)

CHICAGO, June 9.—The convention is open—it was opened formally and according to long-standing methods. The delegates were quite slow in gathering—they ordinarily are, but it could hardly be called an enthusiastic opening. There were no waves of applause sweeping over the hall as political leaders appeared.

Usually the bulletins issued from a convention announce "Gov. Blank has just entered the hall amid great cheering." The convention rose to its feet and cheered as Senator So-and-so walked down the aisle to his seat. "The galleries caught sight of Gen. Blank when he entered the hall and the cheers were taken up by the delegates below."

Such bulletins are customary in conventions, but somehow the eyes of the assembled spectators were not as alert or the interest in persons not as great as is the custom.

Hays Given an Ovation.
When Chairman Hays advanced to the front to call the convention to order he was greeted by an ovation that made his smile even broader than it is wont to be.

He bowed in appreciation and waited without impatience until the enthusiasm had exhausted itself, then in a clear voice he made the preliminary boasts which are deemed necessary on such an occasion—boasts that assured the audience of a coming Republican victory of greater magnitude than the party has ever known. Then he announced the nomination of Senator Lodge as temporary chairman, declared the vote unanimous, appointed a committee to escort the convention's choice to the platform and the keynote speech was delivered.

The style of the address was just what might have been expected from one who stands so high as a scholar; it was a rhetorical success. The Senator followed the established rules of oratory. He began with an appeal to partisan sentiment and this put the audience in a good humor.

Then, taking advantage of the applause that he had drawn from them, he filled in the less exciting material of the speech and reserved for the conclusion of his discussion of the League of Nations. His attack upon the President was a digest of all that has been said in the way of criticism. It was a complete indictment and enumerated all that the Republicans have found fault with. The chief count being directed against what the Senator described as an autocratic spirit.

The President was accused of having disregarded the legislative branch of the Government and usurped authority belonging to Congress. He declared that the rescue of the Government "from Wilson, his heirs and assigns" was the paramount duty of the hour—more important by comparison than any domestic or international issue.

Lodge Manifested Embarrassment.
In giving a list of the things done by the Republican Congress he manifested some embarrassment that the list was not longer and the subjects more important. When it is remembered that the Democrats had been in for six years, enacting and repealing, it would seem that they would have done more than needed to be undone or would have left more that needed to be done if the Republican charge of incompetence is to be borne out.

While no credit was given for the unprecedented tasks performed during the war, no criticism was made of the economic reforms accomplished, and no petty complaint was entered against the mistakes necessarily made in the handling of the enormous volume of war business.

The Republican party was excused for failure to stop profiteering, not on the ground that there is no exploitation going on, but on the ground that the administration has not enforced the laws against profiteering. Senator Lodge did so as far as Senator Johnson and Borah went last night in exonerating Congress. He admitted that there might be some legislation needed, but he charged the administration with lack of energy in protecting the public.

He did not point out any specific remedy that might be provided by legislation, although he emphasized the necessity for increased production as a factor in reducing prices. He also laid a part of the blame—a considerable part—on the increased volume of money, apparently forgetting the stock argument advanced by the financiers in 1918, viz., that it did not matter whether we had much money or little so long as it was all good.

If anyone doubts the complete vindication of the quantitative theory of money—so hotly disputed a quarter century ago—he ought to consult the apologists for high prices. The staunchest supporters of the quantitative theory are to be found among those who want to show that the increased volume of money, and that alone is responsible for the high cost of living. They might have more success but for the fact that the income tax returns give undeniable proof of enormous excess profits.

The prize piece of legislation, according to Senator Lodge, was the railroad law, which returned the transportation lines to private hands. While the audience did not exhibit any special exultation at the announcement of this legislative triumph, the Senator seemed to feel that it established the party's claim to public gratitude. One would fairly infer from the speaker's language and manner that the country had been saved from the menace of government ownership by the timely arrival of a Republican Congress.

Senator Lodge must have been a little disappointed at the calm reception given to his demand for intervention in Mexico. He described as graphically as he could the policy of "watchful waiting," hurled epithets at the Mexican leaders, and called upon the country to save Mexico from herself. If the members of the Resolutions Committee were in the hall at the time, it is not unreasonable to expect that they will modify the tone of the Mexican plank if they have contemplated writing into the platform a specific demand for intervention.

Climax Most Disappointing.
But the Senator's climax was the most disappointing part of his speech. His treatment of the League of Nations is difficult to explain. One is left in doubt as to whether the mildness of his advocacy of ratification with reservations is due to lack of interest in the thing for which he voted, or fear of division in the Republican party. His mild defense of the action of the majority of the Republicans was in marked contrast with the glowing eulogy Senators Johnson and Borah paid to the irreconcilables.

Senator Lodge treated the matter quite judiciously, saying that some Senators objected to the league entirely, while others were willing to accept with such reservations and would purge it of its power to harm. It was noticeable that the outburst of applause that greeted the reference to the position taken by the irreconcilables was loud and general as the approval expected of the action of the majority.

The language employed by the temporary chairman and the divided sentiment manifested by the audience would indicate that the plank on this subject is likely to be a compromise. There is no indication that the position taken by the 15 irreconcilables will receive any vigorous commendation.

Prohibition Act Ignored.
Probably the most remarkable thing about the keynote speech was that it ignored entirely the greatest act of legislation for which the Republican Congress can claim credit viz., the passage of the law enforcing the prohibition act. Here is a statute which reduces crime, safeguards the home and encourages every virtue, and yet the party that gave the support of that law more than two-thirds of its votes in both Senate and House lays no claim to credit. It does not even "point with pride" to the record it has made on this, the greatest moral reform of the generation, if not in the life of the nation.

SPECIAL WIRES TO WHITE HOUSE FROM REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

Press Association Sending Minute Bulletins Over Direct Line to President's Secretary.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, June 9.—Every move and every word uttered in the National Convention in Chicago is being echoed in the White House by means of special telegraph and telephone wires, and in addition minute bulletins are being telegraphed over a direct wire by a press association. This wire does not go to the White House proper, but to the executive offices, which are occupied by Secretary Tumulty, and through him the President is made cognizant of what is happening.

And while no official word has been said, it is known that at least some of those in the White House are confidently expecting to hear within the next three days of a split in the Republican party such as occurred in 1912, and the principal cause of the split will be Senator Hiram Johnson of California, who is expected to live up to his recently acquired name of "Hell Roaring" Hiram.

Throughout yesterday there was a constant stream of Senators and Democratic politicians, who for various reasons, are forced to remain in Washington, to the executive offices. Among them were Pomeroy of Ohio, King of Utah, Pittman of Nevada, Harris of Georgia, and Smith of Arizona. Vance McCormack was a visitor and Roland Morris, American Ambassador to Japan, was another who paid his respects.

The usual Tuesday cabinet meeting was held, and for nearly two hours the President discussed with his department heads the domestic and foreign situation and doubtless the political situation, though none of the cabinet members would admit that such was the case.

New York Printers Get Increase.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, June 9.—New York printers were awarded a wage increase of $11.50 a week here yesterday by County Clerk William E. Kelly of Brooklyn, acting as arbitrator between the publishers' association of New York and Typographical Union No. 6. The increase is retroactive to April 1, when the former contract ended. The men on the day shift get $65 a week. Those on the night shift $55, and those on the third, or "lobster," shift, $61.

$2500 DELEGATES SAY THEY WILL NOT VOTE FOR LOWDEN

Goldstein and Moore, Who Received Campaign Money From Governor, Said to Have Announced Decision.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, June 9.—Circuit Clerk Nat Goldstein, who received $2500 of Lowden campaign money, said last night that, voting as a delegate in the Republican convention, he would not vote for Gov. Lowden. Robert E. Moore, who received a like sum, has told his friends that he also would not vote for Lowden.

It appears virtually certain that Lowden will not receive the vote of a single St. Louis delegate, unless possibly that of Mrs. A. H. Bruggeman, a delegate for Congressman Dyer, who departed from Chicago yesterday and said he probably would not return during the convention.

Lowden would have received the votes of all St. Louis delegates if the disclosures regarding the payment of money to Goldstein and Moore had not been made. Following the admission of the two that they had received $2500 each, Lowden issued a statement to the effect that his managers had paid the money on the representation that it was needed for Lowden organization work in St. Louis, and that, as the delegates had admitted none of it had been used for that purpose, they were "not fit to sit in the national convention."

Not content with withholding their own votes from Lowden, it appears that the influence of the two delegates has been thrown against Lowden with other delegates from St. Louis.

Mrs. E. E. Butler, daughter of Henry L. Weeke, close political and personal friend of Goldstein, announced yesterday that she would not vote for Lowden, and that she expected to vote for Senator Johnson. She is a delegate from the Eleventh District.

Counted Against Lowden.
The Rev. S. A. Moseley, negro delegate from the Twelfth District, is counted against Lowden. He was active in stirring up anti-Lowden sentiment at a meeting of St. Louis negroes last week.

John Schnoll, delegate from the Tenth District, has made no recent announcement regarding his vote, but soon after the disclosures in Washington he said he would not be for Lowden.

This accounts for all the St. Louis district except Fred Eason of St. Louis County. Eason is counted for Lowden. He plays politics with the organization. However, in this connection, there is a story going among delegates that the Babler-Morse combine, or at least some of the politicians it includes among its followers, is very lukewarm in its support of Lowden, notwithstanding the payment to Morse and Babler of $32,000 to build up Lowden sentiment and to elect Lowden delegates.

The combine politicians, it is said, feel that L. L. Emerson, the Lowden manager, could have saved giving the names of the Missourians to whom he paid the money, and that the upheaval in Missouri Republican politics could have been avoided.

The reports that delegates will be encouraged by combine followers to go to other candidates is not generally believed, however, and there is every indication that Morse and Babler are using every effort to hold delegates in line for Lowden. Their support, while seemingly steadfast, is looked upon more in the light of fulfilling an obligation than as real friendship for Lowden.

One of the organizations Republicans, in announcing his opposition to Lowden, said: "I don't take any stock in this story of him being a good business man. I want a business man, for President. No good business man would keep such a carefully itemized account of incidental expenses as he does."

Among the delegates at large from St. Louis there may be a division. Senator Spencer has said he has not decided for whom he will vote. Edward W. Forstall will vote for Senator Knox, if his name is presented. Congressman Dyer would have voted for Lowden if he had remained for the convention. Efforts to reach Mrs. Bruggeman, his alternate, to learn her views, failed.

While Lowden will receive more than 20 St. Louis votes, according to present calculations, Wood Johnson, Knox, Harding and even Pendergast will be represented in the vote delegation on the first ballot.

RECESS APPOINTMENTS MADE ON COMMERCE COMMISSION

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, June 9.—President Wilson today made recess appointments of Henry Jones Ford of New Jersey, Mark W. Potter of New York and James Duncan of Massachusetts to be members of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Martin Taylor, Robert of New York and Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts were named members of the United States Tariff Commission. Nicholas Kelley of New York was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Some Interesting Facts About St. Louis' Greatest Clothing Sale Which Will Begin Tomorrow

Perhaps you are surprised to see a shouting like this through the press about a clothing sale.

It is unusual, you will admit. We are not in the habit of making a noise unless we have something worth making a noise about.

If we were holding clothes sales of this sort every month or every season, they would soon become quite ordinary.

But this is not an ordinary sale—not by any means. It is, without question, an extraordinary one.

We are offering the finest Kuppenheimer clothes, all this season's manufacture, at the lowest prices that we have been able to quote for a year.

Can we be calm when we have news like that to tell? Besides, if we tempered our advertisement mildly, you might miss the story.

Ask any man in the clothing business, and he will tell you that $37.50 retail for a Kuppen-heimer Suit is something that was not looked for this year.

We bought nearly two thousand of them at a great sacrifice. The House of Kuppenheimer favored us because of the tremendous volume of our business.

We did not think of the size of our stock—all we could see was an opportunity to offer clothing values that are truly marvelous, and we grasped it without a moment's hesitation. We recognize our obligation to supply our patrons' needs at the lowest possible prices, and this was an opportunity that we are really glad to secure for our customers. And besides, it meant an opportunity to secure new friends for our rapidly growing clothing business.

We are confident that you are going to recognize this clothing opportunity the same as we did.
The mere statement that the finest Kuppen-heimer Suits, of this season's manufacture, in the greatest variety of materials, patterns and styles, will be sold at $37.50, $47.50 and $57.50, will serve for you to sense the unusual character of the bargains that await you. No charge will be made for alterations.

We cannot be too emphatic or too enthusiastic about this clothing event. It deserves all the good things that can be said. The man who attends this sale and buys one or more of these Suits is going to be very thankful later for the foresight that he used.

We have been assuming in this advertisement that you are familiar with Kuppenheimer clothes, and no reference has been made to their unusually high character and quality. We will say this —that men who know by experience, place Kuppenheimer clothes on a par with the products of the most exclusive tailors.

Representation for Women Gracefully Ceded by Men

Surrender of Rules Committee to Demands of Delegates Is Indication of Current of Affairs.

By Marguerite Martyn.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, June 9.—Missouri women will feel perfectly at home in the convention today. Even yesterday, when I stepped down the few steps from the press section to the main floor of the Coliseum, to pay them a call as one does a newcomer in the neighborhood, I found our two women delegates at large, Mrs. Swan and Mrs. Moyer-Wing and our one delegate, Mrs. Butler, hospitable and ready to chat, and our 29 women alternates all as sociable and settled in their two rows of seats as if they were on a steamboat excursion or an all-day picnic at home.

"Everybody around is remarking about how many women we have in the Missouri delegation," said Mrs. Spitznagel of Clayton, exultantly, waving her hand toward the New York delegation across the aisle.

Mrs. Hutchinson, as usual, was the life of the party. She was the only Missouri woman who had been invited to the Pullman luncheon yesterday. It seems, and she was telling the others all about it, how Mrs. John A. Logan was in the receiving line and of course Mrs. Lowden, who is the daughter of Mrs. Pullman.

"Oh, I tell you, it was a great event for poor old me," she said. "What did you wear?" asked her right hand neighbor, and Mrs. Hutchinson went on to describe what she called just a simple little old black taffeta sort of an afternoon dress.

Two women were not joining in the discussion. I noticed finally, when, at a remark of mine about how much better we could hear the speaker at this great distance than right near him in the press box, toward which the sound amplifiers are not directed, one of them responded acidly:

"Yes, we could hear him very well if you'd just keep quiet."

Presently they asked me to be seated in a vacant chair beyond them. If I'd only help them keep the others quiet.

Women Feel at Home.

Oh, yes, women are perfectly at home by this time in national conventions. Just before I left my seat, a woman had been called upon to offer a resolution, the resolution on resolutions. I believe it was called. She was Mrs. Manley B. Fosson of Minnesota and she told me later in the afternoon that she believed herself to be the first woman who ever had been officially called upon to raise her voice in a national convention.

Just before that, Mrs. J. B. Hume, delegate at large from California, had been appointed on the committee of three to escort Senator Lodge to the platform. Then there are to be several nominations seconded by women, according to present schedule, and according to announcement from the chair the following women were assigned positions in the various committees on permanent organization: Rules and Order, Mrs. Venona Swan, Joplin; Mrs. J. G. South, Kentucky; Mrs. Fosson, Minnesota; Mrs. Dell E. Boyd, Nevada; Mrs. M. H. Hunkins, Tennessee. Organization, Mrs. Frank W. Dodson, Iowa. As honorary vice presidents of the convention, Mrs. C. H. McClatchey, California; Mrs. Florence Knapp, New York; Miss Minnie J. Nelson, North Dakota; Dr. Helen Peabody, South Dakota, and on the committee to notify the presidential nominee, Miss Annie Anderson, Montana.

So it seems the men are accepting the women as gracefully and easily as the women are assuming their new responsibilities.

The most positive evidence of the men's complete surrender was the Rules Committee's acceptance and agreement to the demands of the women for equal representation in the National Committee. I chanced into the suite in the Congress Hotel where the Rules Committee was meeting, and while a doorkeeper stepped aside to speak with somebody, leaving the door a little ajar, I slipped in. There was a vacant place on an inviting looking sofa, and I sat down.

An Uninvited Guest.

I do not know that the meeting was private. No doubt spectators were limited by the smallness of the apartment. I realized at once that a hearing was being given to the committee of five women appointed Sunday afternoon to submit the much-discussed demand for 50-50 representation on the National Committee.

Miss Hay's eyes grew even bigger and bluer than is their wont when she recognized me. I shot her an appealing glance and thereafter she pretended not to see me and I remained, the only outsider present, to hear the whole proceedings.

Mrs. Medill McCormick, author of the resolution, was addressing the committee. She was making her appeal solely on the ground of political wisdom and expediency.

"We are not asking your recognition of us for any reason of sex. We are not asking but rather we are offering you our services, for the sole purpose of helping you. We are not novices, gentlemen, we would not be enfranchised today if we had not had experience in political organization. We know that four years from now you will be begging us to take positions of importance in your councils. This is your opportunity to attract the new voters to your party. We want to help you organize women into Republicans."

Mrs. Edson of California called attention to the fact that the Republicans lost 16 out of 12 full suffrage states last election because they failed to take into account the importance of organizing the women. Mrs. Raymond Robins said, "You have a great problem in overcoming the nonpartisan sentiments of women to which they have adhered through their 10 years' fight for suffrage. We want to help you educate these women to partisanship and, of course, to Republican partisanship."

Presents Women's Claims.

Mrs. McCormick then stipulated just what it was the women wanted. "We realize you cannot at present change your rules to permit women members of the National Committee proper, since in many states these officers are elective," she said, "but your rules already provide that your officers and Executive Committee need not necessarily be members of the committee. We suggest to you, therefore, that you extend the number of officers, adding a vice chairman, and that since you have created an extra treasurer, having now an Eastern and a Western treasurer, that you create another secretaryship. And we see no reason why you should not extend your Executive Committee to 21 instead of 10, or at least to 15. You might provide that your chairman should act as chairman of the Executive Committee."

A motion was made by a man that the matter be turned over to a subcommittee. But he was interrupted by another, referred to as the gentleman from Texas.

"We all know what we want to do about this," he said, "I believe our only difference of opinion is on the question of whether we shall extend the executive committee to 10 or 15. Let us have a vote on these two questions."

An increase to 21 was promptly voted down but 15 received a vociferous, concerted 'aye.' So it was decided. We shall not have to write that awful "women's division of the executive committee of the Republican committee any more."

Women Feel at Home.

Oh, yes, women are perfectly at home by this time in national conventions. Just before I left my seat, a woman had been called upon to offer a resolution, the resolution on resolutions. I believe it was called. She was Mrs. Manley B. Fosson of Minnesota and she told me later in the afternoon that she believed herself to be the first woman who ever had been officially called upon to raise her voice in a national convention.

Musical Comedy de Luxe Is "The Firefly," Which Opens Municipal Opera

Improved Cast and Ensemble, Opulent Settings, Bewitching Lighting Effects, Noted at Premiere of Second Season.

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

LET it be said at once that public opinion in St. Louis, as represented by the second season's premiere last night at the Municipal Theater in Forest Park, has experienced, in three salient respects, nothing less than a revolutionary improvement over that of 1919.

In the first place, the principal singers engaged for the summer—all but two of them newcomers in the enterprise—revealed themselves as a veritable aviary of excellent voices, one after another emerging, to the surprise and great content of the hearers, with practiced tone production, melodious quality, skilled expressiveness, and diction clear to the last letter. Secondly, the scenic effect which will not be content to promenade through the roles; instead, all will be acting every minute, to the top of their animation. Finally, there has been introduced into the entire production that rare and precious ingredient—brains!

The first week's offering is Rudolf Friml's "The Firefly," which is no doubt the lightest of the series of seven works listed, but which is produced in so opulent a manner as to constitute musical comedy de luxe. Those with curiosity to see this form of entertainment at its height and apotheosis have a unique opportunity to gratify their interest. In the musical comedy of the theaters, we must usually satisfy ourselves with one singing star, or none at all, and the appearance of a vocalist like Irvin Pankovitch, regarded as an event. Here, in addition to Miss Pavloska, there is a pleiad of five or six luminaries. And in what theater would one find a musical comedy presented with an orchestra of 50 and a chorus of 72, with such artistic magnitude and munificence of staging and lighting; and above all, upon so great and lovely a proscenium as that of the Municipal Theater?

Audience Not More Than 3000.

Yet, the opening night audience was neither large nor demonstratively enthusiastic. Singularly enough, the attendance was in precise ratio to the price of the seats. While the section of 1200 free seats at the top of the amphitheater was about half filled, the 25-cent seats were almost deserted; the 50-cent tier was only a trifle less desolate, and the 75-cent seats, at either side of the lowest tier, were only sparsely occupied. But the $1 seats were thronged, as were the boxes. The total attendance was estimated at not more than 3000. The management found encouragement in the fact that this was twice the first-night attendance of last season, and consolation in the reflection that the biggest audiences are always drawn by the Thursday, Friday and Saturday performances.

Taking up the various phases of the production of "The Firefly" in order, it was found first that the new stage director, Charles Sinclair, who is regarded as a wizard in his field, had worked wonders of lavish staging and detail, artistic care. He is said to have spent $1600 alone for the masses of artificial flowers which banked the stage in profusion in the second and third acts. The three settings, chosen in a contest conducted by the St. Louis Art League, won, with a reservation to be noted later, universal admiration, and they were illuminated, from new concrete towers at either side of the proscenium, by light which did not fling itself in a glare upon the stage, but seemed to melt into the objects it irradiated with a soft and mellow reluctance.

Visions of Magic Loveliness.
Seen from the rim of the amphitheater's bowl, the stage looked like some magic and colorful vision from fairyland. At the beginning of each act, the light gradually brightened, with an effect like that of a dissolving view in a stereopticon, until each face, costume and appointment was picked out in radiant relief; and at the end of each scene the light was gradually faded away until darkness was almost imperceptibly present.

The first setting was that of the recreation pier at Twenty-third street, New York, at the foot of which lies a steam yacht. Upon the pier crowded a multitude of guests, and a band of picturesquely attired Italian street singers. A fountain played at the center, and in the background were the arches of the pier. The ship was so arranged that, at the moment of departure, it slid away from its wharf, and almost, but not quite, disappeared.

The second scene was that of an estate in Bermuda, and the stage was massed with palms and tropical blossoms. The marble mansion, which was slightly awry, and the colonnades were legitimate enough, but it was hard to see how the scenic artist related the opportunity of employing the entire stage for this logically spacious view, instead of cutting it off with a screen of greenery. The vista over the bridge would have added much to the impression of a great and opulent estate.

The final scene, that of a rose garden in a Long Island estate, was extremely beautiful, with its throngs of roses everywhere, even draping in crimson blankets a grand piano in the middle of the stage. Two illuminated fountains, provided for this scene, were stricken with first-night perversity and declined to function.

Miss Pavloska's Success.
The grouping of the big numbers of persons on the stage was effective and skillful, and the entrances and exits were managed with address, save that at the close of the work there had been no scenery rehearsal. It is said that the assembly merely stood still and let the extinction of the lights provide a "curtain." The costumes, partly obtained here and partly ordered from New York, were of the noticeable features of the performance was the assurance and ease with which the chorus moved about the stage. In its ensemble, the production showed many signs of an adept and talented hand.

Turning now to the principals, Miss Pavloska won the audience with her warm, supple and sympathetic mezzo-soprano, and even more by her vivacious acting. Her role of Nina, really had four aspects: she was first a street singer, then a tough gamine, then a housewife, and finally an imposing grand opera prima donna. She displayed no mean gifts as a comedienne under these versatile requirements; in the male phases of the role she was the most winsome and sparkling of boys.

In Bernard Ferguson, the company now has an excellent baritone, with an attractive voice and considerable flexibility in acting. Lillian Crossman's strong and excellent soprano was one of the features of the evening's enjoyment; and there is a question as to whether the due waltz, which she gave with Ferguson, "Sympathy," was not the most effective vocal selection of the performance. Charles E. Gallagher, who, like Miss Pavloska, is a grand opera singer, had the part of a benevolent and sentimental old German musician; to his unusual skill in make-up, he added a rendition of the scene, "A Beautiful Ship From Toyland," which was a little masterpiece.

Eva Olivetti, the new soubrette, was delicious in the part of a French maid, pleasing as singer, actress and dancer. Warren Proctor, the new tenor, displayed a voice of much sweetness and artistic training; he employs a mellow voice for high tones which is charming, as far as it can be heard. Proctor surpasses last year's tenor, Craig Campbell, in stature and romantic presence; it remains to be seen whether he will rival that light opera favorite in fire and vibrancy of voice. The practiced Mildred Rogers made surprisingly much of the comedy possible to the role of a wealthy and foolish society dowager. Minor parts were acceptably taken by Elva Magnus and Marda Veit.

But the member of the cast who came near seizing upon first laurels in the production was Raymond Crane, the new first comedian. Judging from his work last night in the part of a confidential secretary, the public will not regret Frank Moulan, whom he supplanted, and may look forward with relish to the Ko-Ko which he is to portray in "The Misadventure." Crane reminds one considerably of Ed Wynne, in a more wholesome edition. He sings well, dances with expert nimbleness, and is funny without trying. An interpolated song—"A Little Bug Will Get You Some Day," words by Roy Atwell, from the musical comedy, "Alone at Last"—tickled the gathering's risibilities so much that the comedian might be singing it yet, had he not run out of verses. Harry Hermans did capably what fell to him in the part of a valet.

Some Defects Noted.
Max Bendix, also a newcomer, directed the orchestra with the finesse and flexibility of an expert. The excellent singing of the chorus was due to the new chorus master, William Parsons. They, with Sinclair, were the executives responsible for the evening's success.

A few defects remain to be noted, one of them serious. Ferguson's makeup as an elderly uncle of the hero was too youthful, and the "streaks of gray" in his hair about which he spoke were not visible a few rows from the stage. Miss Pavloska's Italian costume in the first act was ill-fitting, being too full and long, and was not especially becoming.

Her interpolation of the "Habenera" from "Carmen," instead of the thankless concert waltz provided in the score, was not well advised, for no singer could do it justice after racing about the stage for two acts. Finally, there were such interminable waits between the acts on account of slowness of scene-shifting, that the performance was not over until nearly midnight. Either the changes of scenery will have to be speeded up or considerable sections must be slashed from the opera.

well came back he had a contract for the sale of all the theaters in which I was interested. I had given him the price at which I knew that I could buy up all the stock in the theaters and deliver it.

"Here is the contract he brought back," and Koplar tossed over an instrument written in contract form, one of the first paragraphs of which mentioned the theaters involved and contained this phrase: "Which hereinafter shall be known as Mr. Cornwell's theatrical interests."

"Can you beat it?" Koplar exclaimed. "Do you wonder I'm all up in the air. Here are my theaters, in which I personally own more than $500,000, described in a contract as 'Mr. Cornwell's theatrical interests,' in which Mr. Cornwell's cash investment is not more than $2500."

Manager at $7500 a Year.
"The Missouri Famous Players Corporation was to be organized to take over the theaters. I discovered that Cornwell was to be president of the corporation. I was to be manager of the theaters at $7500 a year, and was to employ two of my brothers, Sol and Nathan, at $5000 a year. It was explained to me that it would require some time to organize the corporation and work the conduct of the 19 theaters into one uniform organization. I was instructed to proceed in the details necessary to complete delivery of titles theaters. However, I was to deliver possession of the theaters at once, and I did.

"Well, things went on for a while without my getting any money. I commenced to ask Cornwell about it. He put me off from day to day. Finally he said to me, Harry, get the deeds and everything ready for May 10 and we'll wind it up."

"We set up a straw man, as is customary in such deals. Ed Costman, Sam Hamburg's chauffeur, was chosen to be the straw man. A few days before May 10 I put up deeds to the Kings, Pershing, Shenandoah, Juniata and Novelty theaters with Costman. Instead of holding the deeds until May 10, Costman transferred them to William Hauschulte, a real estate man, who transferred them to the Famous Players Corporation.

"I came, and Cornwell said that all the details for the transfer had not been accomplished. I told him I wanted my money or I wanted my theaters. I was to get $25,000 a month for 12 months and the remainder was to be secured by mortgages and bonds. By the way, Cornwell was to market the mortgages and bonds."

Says He Was Told to Go to Court.
"Cornwell told me, 'Why, the only way you can get your theaters now is to go to court.' So I'm going to court. I want to find out whether I own these theaters or whether I've been dreaming I owned them."

"Now they were collecting all the receipts each day. One night I determined to stop that. I went to the Arco Theater, one of the string. I said to the manager, who had worked for me for five years, 'Beginning tonight you deposit all receipts to the credit of the Arco Theater Co., not the Famous Players.' I called up later and he told me that two of Cornwell's men were there and said that they were going to stay there. I went to the theater and ordered them out. Cornwell showed up. We argued for an hour and a half. Cornwell won. He has a magnetic tongue. I told the theater manager to continue to deposit the receipts for the credit of the Famous Players. Cornwell assured me that everything would be all right.

Removed as Manager.
"Last Saturday I got a notice that my services as manager no longer were needed. It was signed by Cornwell. When I visited the Novelty Theater, I was handed another notice ordering me not to enter my own theaters. Now, mind you, no company owns the Novelty. I own that myself, alone. I was being ordered in my own theater not to come into my own theater."

"Upon inquiry for a statement of his understanding of the dispute, Cornwell referred a reporter to his attorney, former Judge Henry S. Caulfield.

Caulfield declined to discuss the matter further than to say that the agreement with Koplar was being kept, that he had received money from the Famous Players Corporation and that his present veering in the deal is his desire to get out of his theaters so that he can deliver to a competitor of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation at a more desirable figure.

"With the notice, I was handed this. He exhibited a cartoon taken from the Exhibitors' Herald. It showed an arm labeled Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The cuff of the shirt sleeve was labeled 'Wall Street.' The cuff button in the cuff was the dollar sign, $, with the tightening grasp of the hand from Meramec Highlands. Fishing Rod Explodes; Boy Hurt.
By the Associated Press.
SYDNEY, N. S., June 9.—Melville Brennan, 14 years old, was brought to a hospital here yesterday, badly injured as a result of trying to use a fishing rod which his friend, Charles McKinnon, of the Nova Scotia Highlanders, found in a German dugout in France. The rod was filled with high explosives and detonated when the boy tried to put it together.

BRYAN-DEGARMO AND ZELLE-KASTOR NUPTIALS

Two Weddings Planned for Tomorrow, Former at Central Presbyterian Church.

TWO of the most interesting weddings planned for this week will be solemnized tomorrow evening, when Miss Mary Cora deGarmo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank deGarmo of 6186 Washington boulevard, will become the bride of Charles W. Bryan, and when Miss Theresa Kastor will become the bride of Harry Gibson Zelle.

The deGarmo-Zelle nuptials will take place at Central Presbyterian Church at 8:30 o'clock, the Rev. Dr. Donald MacLeod officiating. Following the ceremony a reception will be held at the home of the bride's parents.

Miss deGarmo will have as her matron of honor her sister, Mrs. Harry D. Payne, and as maid of honor Miss Gladys Brazier of Nichols, La. The bridesmaids will be Mrs. Arthur Proetz and Mrs. Paul M. Potter of Atlanta, Ga.

The bride's gown will be of silver cloth and white tulle with a court train of silver cloth and pink and white tulle. Her veil will be in coronet with orange blossoms. She will carry orchids and valley lilies in shower effect.

Miss deGarmo is a graduate of Washington University and a member of the Pi Beta Phi Sorority. She served for a year as the chief dietitian of all the hospitals in the Bordeaux district in France during the war.

Mr. Bryan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Bryan of New Rochelle, N. Y., formerly of this city. He is a graduate of Washington University and a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity.

Garnet deGarmo will serve as best man and the groomsmen and ushers will be Gordon Black, James Thompson, John Foley and Harry D. Payne. Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Bryan and their daughter, Mrs. William Washington of Rochester, N. Y., are here for the wedding.

The marriage of Miss Kastor and Mr. Zelle will take place at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Kastor, 6208 Washington boulevard, in the presence of relatives and a few close friends. The Rev. Dr. George of the Congregational Church will officiate. Miss Mary Helen Kastor, a sister of the bride, will attend her as maid of honor and Walter Zelle, a brother of the bridegroom, will be best man.

The bride's gown will be of white brocade georgette with a tulle veil forming the train. She will wear orange blossoms in the veil and carry lilies of the valley.

Miss Kastor received her education at Mary Institute and the Condon School in Washington.

Mr. Zelle is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Zelle of 6311 Westminster place and a graduate of Washington University.

Social Items

An out of town wedding of interest here which will take place today is that of Miss Mary Rhodes of Danville, Ky., and Ewing Harris of Louisville. The bride is the sister of Boye Rhodes and a cousin of Mrs. Robert Burkham. Mr. and Mrs. Burkham and Mr. Rhodes will attend the wedding.

An engagement of interest recently announced was that of Miss Laura Caroline Woltke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis H. Woltke of 6521 Waterman avenue, to John Knox Nimock of New York City. The wedding probably will take place in September.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry M. Hanson of 6477 Waterman avenue entertained with a bridge party Friday evening in honor of their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Stewart of Kansas City, formerly of St. Louis. A dinner party was given in their honor Sunday evening at Bevo Mill and on Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Maestre, 4444 Lindell boulevard, entertained with a bridge party for them.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Parker, 19 Washington terrace, will depart the middle of July for their summer home in the Adirondacks.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Van Arsdale, formerly of the Lodge Hotel, are at 109 Mermod place, Kirkwood, for the summer.

Miss Charlotte L. Martin of Washington is the guest of Mrs. Claude A. Eaton of 4009 Lindell boulevard.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Simon, 5727 Clemens avenue, will be at home Sunday evening from 7 to 11 in honor of the graduation of their daughter, Carolyn, from Soldan High School.

Miss Elizabeth B. Parker of 39 Washington terrace will depart tomorrow for Portoven, Pa., to attend the Hill School commencement exercises.

MAN OF 80 MARRIES WIDOW OF HIS SON

Has Lived to See Many Wonders Accomplished, but Does Not Expect to Talk to Mars.

NEW YORK, June 9.—"I have lived to see the telegraph, telephone, automobile, parlor car, flying machine, submarine and steel battleship come into general use, but I don't expect to live to see communication established with Mars," said A. Preston Williams, the Roseland (N. J.) 80-year-old bridegroom, "though it would not surprise me any, considering the things that are common now that were hardly dreamed of when I was a boy."

Williams, hale and hearty, with snow-white hair and beard, a clear blue eye and erect carriage, quietly married the widow of his son, Frank, May 17. Their friends did not know about it until last Friday, and that evening nearly the whole town serenaded them.

"There was some noise, I will say," said Williams, "but my wife heard they were coming and she got busy cooking, and when we invited them in there were some good old-fashioned things to eat."

"I was born in West Orange in 1840. My folks were of the old stock, living on my mother's side to be 80 and 90 years, and around 60 and 70 on my father's. They were farmers, and I took naturally to farming. With the exception of a few years that I tried mining iron ore, and working as a carpenter, I have been an outdoors man, farmer and gardener, and that's one reason why I am so healthy at my age."

"I keep my mind busy with pleasant thoughts, always thinking kindly of neighbors and townsmen, and I read a great deal. Reading good books and stories of adventure refreshes the mind.

"I have a garden here on our place where I raise almost everything that will grow. I work in the garden, tend the chickens, walk about for exercise and come in and read. Reading the papers keeps the mind young. I like to talk and speculate. While I lived at Chester years ago, Prof. Langley was experimenting with his flying machine. Two men older than I, pool-poohed Langley, saying men never would fly. I told them they might not live to see flying machines as common as railroad trains, but I expected to. And I have."

Williams's wife before her first marriage was a Long Island girl, Miss Allen Moger. Her first husband, Frank E. Williams, son of her present husband, died in 1891. After the death of her mother-in-law in 1915 she kept house for her father-in-law, intending always to keep house for him, and there being a warm affection between them, they decided to get married. Williams' only living son, E. A. Williams, Registrar of Vital Statistics, granted the marriage license, and the Rev. L. D. Stultz, a friend of the family, married them. Mrs. Williams looks about 45, with black hair and kindly brown eyes.

C. F. HATFIELD IS RE-ELECTED

Charles F. Hatfield, secretary and general manager of the Convention, Publicity and Tourist Bureau, was re-elected president of the community advertising department of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at the convention in Indianapolis, Ind.

Hatfield was also elected a member of the national committee of the clubs, which is the governing body of the organization. The bureau has an exhibit at the convention showing how St. Louis obtains national advertising through the large number of conventions in this city.

KING HONORS GEN. GORGAS

Former Surgeon-General Made Knight Commander of Order.

LONDON, June 9.—King George yesterday conferred a Knight Commandership of the Order of St. Michael and St. George on Major-General William C. Gorgas, former Surgeon-General of the United States Army. The King took advantage of his visit of inspection at the Millbank Military Hospital to call on the distinguished American at Queen Alexandra's Nursing Home. The King complimented him on his great achievements in conquering malaria in the canal zone by medical science, saying that in this way the construction of the canal was made possible.

A SURE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

BURGLARS ROB CARUSO HOME OF $500,000 JEWELRY

Wife of Noted Tenor, Aroused by Burglar Alarm,
Arrives in Time to See Thieves Escaping.

By the Associated Press
EAST HAMPTON, N. C., June 9.
—Burglars broke into the home of Enrico Caruso, noted tenor, here last night and escaped with jewelry valued at $500,000. The robbery was discovered by Mrs. Caruso who was aroused by the ringing of a burglar alarm attached to a steel casket in her room in which the jewels were kept.

With her servants she rushed to her room only to hear footsteps of the escaping robbers. A few minutes later the servants saw an automobile with two persons speeding away. The police were notified and guarded the only motor route out of East Hampton, but no trace of the burglars was found.

Caruso is filling an engagement in Havana, Cuba.

A diamond necklace and a pearl necklace, valued at $75,000 to $100,000, the bridal gift of Caruso, were taken. The other loot includes eight diamond rings, a pair of diamond earrings, two diamond hairpins, a flexible diamond bracelet and two gold watches.

Mrs. Caruso said she found the window in her bedroom broken and the steel safe gone. There were no signs of a ladder but entrance could have been gained by climbing to a roof, she said.

The safe was found later about 200 yards from the house. The police said the manner in which the robbers worked indicated a familiarity with the premises.

Caruso has been the victim of many robberies. His villa near Florence, Italy, has been ransacked three times and in 1912 several valuable art relics were stolen.

Thirty barrels of wine and an automobile were "commandeered" from his Italian villa by a "work committee" during disorders about Florence last July.

MRS. LONG'S PAPER STOCK HOLDING IS 2240 SHARES

This, and Henry B. Graham's 1660 Shares Are All of the Preferred Issue.

Statements made in the Post-Dispatch in the last two days, as to the ownership of preferred stock of the Graham Paper Co. by the two chief holders, Mrs. Breckinridge Long and Henry B. Graham, have been incorrect as to the exact figures.

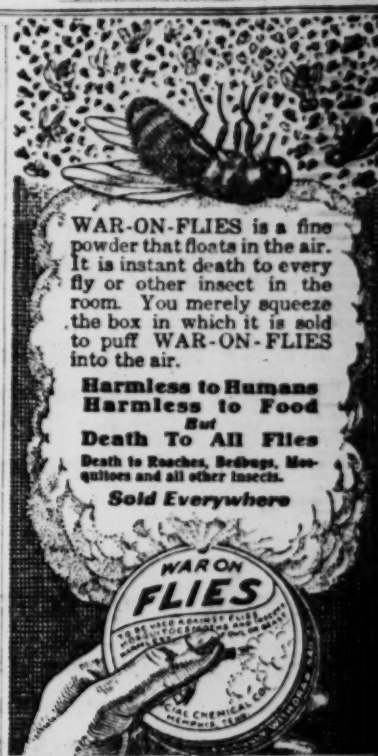

Mrs. Long's holding is 2240 shares of preferred stock, instead of the larger number which was stated, and Henry B. Graham's holding of preferred is 1660 shares. Mrs. Long, a daughter of B. B. Graham, is the wife of the Third Assistant Secretary of State, who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator. Henry B. Graham is a nephew of B. B. Graham, and his business affairs were placed by him, a few years ago, in the hands of trustees.

A block of 350 shares of preferred is held by G. W. McFarland of Decatur, Ill., formerly connected with the company, and there is a smaller block held by the estate of a former president of the company, named French. The remainder of the preferred stock is held in scattered amounts.

At 7 per cent a year, the return to which the preferred stock is limited, Mrs. Long's annual income from preferred stock would be $15,680, and Henry B. Graham's income from preferred would be $11,620. Long has declared that his wife owns none of the company's common stock, which has paid 120 per cent a year in the war period, since 1915.

Missing Baby Returned.

CHICAGO, June 9.—Raymond Pallasch, 2 years old, who was carried away five days ago, according to the police, by a childless woman who wanted to adopt a baby, was returned to his parent today. Neighbors, recognizing him, telephoned police. Meanwhile, the baby was taken to the vicinity of a downtown police station, where he would be found quickly. The woman declares she was given the baby to hold at a department store and his mother never returned.

MINNIS SUGGESTS NAGEL BE GIVEN BABLER'S PLACE

Candidate for Missouri Republican Nomination for Senator Continues Fight on National Committee-man.

HYDE AND MORSE BREAK OVER FIGHT

Former, Candidate for Republican Nomination for Governor, Refuses in Convention to Talk to Morse.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, June 9.—Charles Nagel, former Secretary of Commerce and Labor in President Taft's Cabinet, was brought forward today as a possibility to defeat Jacob Babler for Republican national nomination when the Missouri delegation to the Republican national convention meets tonight to consider re-electing its action of 10 days ago in re-electing Babler.

The Nagel suggestion came from James L. Minnis, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States Senator, who has been the leader in the fight against the St. Louis Republican machine and in the fight to oust Babler as national committeeman. It is probable that Nagel's name will be placed before the delegation by F. W. Sasse of Brunswick, who has joined with Minnis in the fight on Babler.

Under the present plan there will be no motion at the delegation meeting to reconsider the vote by which Babler was re-elected but instead the anti-Babler forces will proceed on the theory that Babler's election was illegal and that in reality there still exist a vacancy in the National Committee membership from Missouri unless formal action is taken by the delegation here before the adjournment of the convention.

At Meeting Tonight. Proceeding on this theory, the motion tonight will be to take up the election of a national committee. According to usage the delegation is not legally a delegation until the names of the members are placed on the roll of the national convention and any action taken by it as a delegation prior to that time is of no effect if it is challenged. It also pointed out that in the meeting which elected Babler there were several delegates whose seats were contested. If there should be no re-election they hold the vacancy will exist and can be filled only by the National Committee or the State Committee if the power is delegated to it by the National Committee.

Minnis said today that he had discussed Nagel with other members of the delegation and that he felt confident that Nagel can be elected over Babler. Of course in the ironing out of the affair tonight it is possible that some other Republican than Nagel will be brought forward as the man to back for Babler's place, but this afternoon it appears probable that the anti-Babler forces will go before the meeting backing Nagel.

A definite break between Arthur M. Hyde, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, and L. (Liv) Morse of Excelsior Springs, Republican boss of Northwest Missouri, is one development of the agitation to remove Babler. Threatened for several days, in fact since Morse and Babler testified a week ago to some but not all the details of the Lowden campaign expenditures in Missouri in the Senate investigation in Washington, Morse's friends on the Missouri delegation have been trying to talk the breach. Notwithstanding their efforts it has been gradually widening, and yesterday appeared as an open rupture. Morse met Hyde in the convention hall and stopped to talk to him. Hyde has been active in demanding a meeting of the delegation to reconsider the vote by which Babler was re-elected national committeeman. "Arthur," Morse said, "what are you trying to do anyway?"

"What do you mean?" Hyde returned. "All this talking you have been doing," Morse continued. "With a show of feeling, Hyde said, 'Liv, I don't want to talk to you.'"

They looked either at each other a moment without speaking and then turned and walked in different directions.

The Hyde-Morse friendship, which has existed for several months until yesterday, was rather a recent arrangement. They reside in the same general part of the State, and during the Bull Moose years were bitter political opponents. Hyde, having joined with the Progressives, while Morse always has been a "stand-patter" Republican of the solidest type.

Morse Declared for Hyde.

When Morse, after becoming the Lowden paymaster in Missouri, started out to elect Lowden delegates in the Third Congressional District, he discovered that he was encountering opposition at every turn, and that the most of the opposition was coming from Hyde's friends. Being a practical politician, he laid the wires for an understanding with Hyde's organization, and as a result Morse declared himself for Hyde for Governor and he was able to get Lowden delegates.

Politicians wondered at the combination and speculated upon how it would continue. When it first became definitely known that Morse and Babler, working together to elect delegates who would vote for Babler's re-election and for Lowden, had distributed approximately $12,000 to politicians throughout the State, there were rumors that some of the money had gone to Hyde or persons closely identified with his campaign.

Hyde telegraphed the rumor to Senator Spencer and demanded that the witnesses from Missouri be questioned closely upon that point. The questioning of Morse and Babler caused the strained relations between Hyde and Morse.

It developed at the hearing that some of the money went to friends of Hyde, though there was not the slightest indication that it went into Hyde's campaign or that he had the slightest knowledge that his friends had received it.

The fact that Babler and Morse could remember the names of all of Hyde's friends, but were strangely forgetful that E. E. McJimsey of Springfield, Hyde's opponent for the nomination, received $1000 of the Lowden money, which later developed through an admission by McJimsey, is said to have angered Hyde and to have started him wondering as to the strength of Morse's friendship for him, considered in connection with the close relationship between Morse and Babler.

Babler Before Senators.

Hyde is said to have particularly resented Babler's attitude when asked about reported contributions to Hyde, and to have felt that if Morse had been careful of his interests, Babler would have taken greater care that no suspicion attach to Hyde. Hyde's friends in this connection called attention to the following questions and answers during Babler's testimony:

Senator Spencer: I have received a telegram from Mr. Hyde, Mr. Babler, who, as you know had been running for Governor out there. Did any money go to Mr. Hyde? He was very anxious to know whether any amount of money. He said there had been some charge that some Lowden money had come through him or to him. Did any money at all that you disbursed go to Mr. Hyde?

Mr. Babler: I didn't give him anything.

Senator Spencer: So far as you know, he didn't get any of the Lowden money. Is that right?

Mr. Babler: Well, I didn't give him any. He didn't get any of this $17,000.

The Chairman: He asked you a straight question there. Can you answer it, whether you know he was getting any money from Lowden?

Mr. Babler: I didn't know of him getting any. Morse testified that he had Mr. Hecht, I think is his name—

Reed (interposing): Hukriede?

Mr. Babler: No! Kesterson.

Senator Spencer: Mr. Morse testified that no money went to Mr. Hyde or any State candidate.

Mr. Babler: I don't know of any money going to Hyde.

Senator Spencer: That is your testimony, too?

Mr. Babler: Yes, sir.

Senator Reed: What was the reason you rather hesitated there so long, Mr. Babler?

Mr. Babler: Well, I was just trying to think, Senator, but I didn't give him a cent.

Senator Reed: Well, do you know of him getting any money from Lowden?

Mr. Babler: I don't know of anyone paying any money to Hyde.

Senator Reed: Did you hear of anything of the kind?

Mr. Babler: No.

Senator Spencer: You seemed to hesitate, and I had the same impression that Senator Reed does, that perhaps there was some doubt about it.

Hyde's Feeling in the Matter.

Hyde is said by his friends to have felt that the hesitancy noticed by the Senators might not have been accidental, and that that was a very good place for Babler to have remembered about the $1000 contribution to McJimsey, which he did not mention in his testimony.

James L. Minnis and Lieutenant Colonel Dwight F. Davis, candidates for the nomination for Senator, have been actively working among the Missouri delegates in an effort to obtain a sufficient number of votes to oust Babler, while Senator Spencer has failed to join in the demand for an investigation by the delegation into the Lowden expenditures.

Spencer has frequently been in conference with Nat Goldstein and Robert E. Moore, delegates, who admitted receiving $2500 each from the Lowden fund. They have consistently supported him for renomination.

Senator Cummins Renominated.

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., June 9.—United States Senator Albert B. Cummins was renominated on the Republican primary ticket at the Iowa primary election Monday, according to unofficial returns tabulated by the Des Moines Capital.

Cummins' vote was 107,643 and S. W. Brookhart's 86,440 in 2218 precincts out of 2247 in the State.

Inventive Genius Makes Calomel Delightful

Calomel, the Most Valuable of Drugs, Now Purified From Its Nausea and Danger—"Calotabs" the New Name.

The medicinal virtues of calomel are in no way connected with its nauseating and dangerous qualities, as is proven by the fact that the new calomel tablet, called Calotabs, is free from objectionable effects yet retains all of the purgative and water-purifying qualities of the old-style calomel. For biliousness, indigestion, constipation and indigestion, and wherever calomel is essential, the new de-natured calomel tablet is a practically perfect laxative.

To inspire public confidence in this new discovery, the manufacturers have authorized druggists everywhere to refund the price if the customer is not "perfectly delighted" with Calotabs. Sold only in original packages, sealed. Price thirty-five cents. One tablet at bedtime, with a swallow of water. No taste, no nausea, no griping, no salts. You wake up in the morning with a clean liver, feeling fine, and a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you please—no danger.

COMMANDER FORBIDS USE OF LEGION'S NAME IN POLITICS

State Adjutant Asked to Curb Activities of John S. Seibert of St. Louis.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 9.—The use of the name of the "American Legion" in any political campaign, regardless of the party, will not be tolerated in the State of Missouri.

There have been but few instances of this, but a recent case in St. Louis, according to Edward J. Cahill, State Adjutant of the Legion, has made a precedent necessary in regards to stopping the practice.

A letter to Cahill yesterday from Robert M. Clayton, State Commander, contained the request that the activity of John S. Seibert of St. Louis be curbed by a letter from state headquarters. Clayton inclosed a clipping from a St. Louis newspaper, in which Seibert endorsed of this, but a recent case in St. Louis, according to Edward J. Cahill, State Adjutant of the Legion, has made a precedent necessary in regards to stopping the practice.

Cahill says the adoption of some method of disciplining members who take such unauthorized steps will be taken up at the next national convention of state adjutants.

TWO REAL ESTATE FIRMS NOTIFIED OF RENT INCREASES

One Company in International Life Building Temporarily Beats Attempt at Advance in Justice Court.

OTHER CONSIDERS LEGAL RESISTANCE

Concerns Affected Are the Alhambra and the Goldwasser and Dubinsky, Told to Vacate July 1.

Rent increasing, which is being carried on merrily by real estate agents wherever an apartment lease expires, has hit the real estate agents themselves.

Two real estate firms, tenants of offices in the International Life Building, Eighth and Chestnut streets, have been notified of increases in their rent. One of the firms, through its knowledge of the technique, was able to go into court and beat the attempted increase for the time being. The other has been served with legal notice to vacate July 1, and is considering possible means of legal resistance.

The Alhambra Realty Co., of which Richard A. Boyle is president and James E. Fogarty secretary, received its rent increase in the form of a charge of $30 for electric lights, made on the rent bill which it received May 1. This was in addition to the monthly rent of $32.50. The company occupies rooms 208-9-10 of the International Life Building, and there had been no charge for lights previously. The lease, it appears does not mention the item of lights.

Realty Company Wins Suit.
The realty company did not pay the bill, and the building company, May 4, mailed to the realty company a notice to vacate June 1. This was a tactical error, as the real estate firm was quick to perceive. A notice to vacate, to be legal, must be served in person, not sent through the mail. On this ground, the realty company won an ouster suit which was tried in Justice McClesney's court a few days ago. The realty company then tendered the regular rent, $32.50, for May, and it was accepted in court.

The Goldwasser & Dubinsky Real Estate Co., occupying three rooms on the second floor of the same building, was notified April 29 that its rent would be increased June 1 from $72.50 to $145 a month, a 100 per cent advance. When June 1 came the company refused to pay the increase, and a notice to vacate July 1 was served.

Carl Dubinsky, a lawyer, a brother of one of the members of the firm, said he would fight the case in court, and would carry it on appeal through the Circuit Court and the Court of Appeals if necessary. He said he would contend that the new rent was exorbitant, and would summon real estate experts to testify to this.

Chouteau Explains Increases.
Henri Chouteau, president of the International Building Co., who acquired control of the building April 3, said the question of increased rentals had been settled to the satisfaction of most of the tenants, on a basis of 30 to 50 per cent increases. He said it was not intended to make a general extra charge for electric lights. He said nothing as to his intention regarding the Alhambra Company, but said that if Goldwasser & Dubinsky did not move out July 1 he would institute proceedings against them. The increases were made necessary, he said, by the added cost of maintenance, labor and supplies in every form.

The present prevalence of rent increases has caused many apartment tenants to be confronted with the third advance demanded within 2 or 3 years. For those whose leases are expiring, demands of 40 to 75 per cent more, as the basis for a new lease, are coming to be the expected thing. Nor will the agents give more than a one-year lease, even on these terms. They will sign a lease for one year only, and the tenant can spend the year in pleasant speculation on what the increase of a year hence will be.

A Typical Example.
A typical instance is furnished by a Pershing apartment house, built three years ago, where the rent for four rooms and sun porch for the first two years was $46 a month net, through concessions made on a $52.50 rate. July 1 last the rent was increased to $60, and now was given recently that on the first of next month the rent would be $85, and "no decorations," although the place had not been decorated since constructed. The tenant protested, but the landlord countered with the information that he already was in possession of an offer of $95 a month for the apartment, and would be glad to have possession. He was simply letting the tenant remain at $85 as a "favor." The tenant, appreciating that there was actually no place to which he could move, signed the lease.

Dwelling-house owners, some of whom rent by the month without leases, have made periodic increases. A general movement to compel tenants to buy dwellings began last summer, and many, who had no desire to do so, bought to escape the alternative of eviction, with no place to go. Some of these purchasers are now convinced that, by buying at the prices then demanded, they did pretty well. Those who are buying now are paying considerably more.

REFORMED CRIMINALS AID POLICE

Search for Man Who Beat Daughter of Social Worker.

NEW YORK, June 9.—Scores of reformed criminals, including several murderers and gangsters, aided the police today in search for "the only man who ever failed to make good," after being befriended by George B. Ellis, social worker, known as "the Bowery Caruso," who has helped more than 5000 "down-and-outers" to return to honest living.

Lillian, the 12-year-old daughter of the slain missionary, is in a hospital with serious injuries sustained in a desperate struggle with this unnamed man, who beat her into unconsciousness during the absence of her parents and then fled. Recently Ellis bought a new suit of clothes and secured a position for the man, who had just been released from prison and received into the Ellis home as a welcome guest.

IRELAND SOUGHT LOANS AS STOCK SALE WAS PUSHED

BlueBird Treasurer Held Out Enticing Offers While President Scratched to Keep Plant Going.

While B. F. Williams, treasurer of the BlueBird Manufacturing Co., was issuing circulars and pamphlets in aid of the selling of $1,000,000 of the company's stock in the early months of this year, Ward Stone Ireland, president of the company, was making frantic efforts to borrow money with which to keep the company's factory in operation and pay dividends on the $1,000,000 of stock already outstanding, nearly all of which was held by about 600 St. Louisans who had invested in it since last July.

Liberty Bonds were pledged and completed washing machines, which could not be shipped because of the insurgent switchmen's strike, were placed in storage in large numbers and money was borrowed on the warehouse receipts.

The prospect of the continued prosperity of the company and its ability to continue to pay dividends at the rate of 12 per cent a year were dwelt upon with much emphasis in the circulars and pamphlets issued by Treasurer Williams, who had been placed in sole charge of the stock-selling campaign.

One of the pamphlets had the attractive cover title, "Seven Millions Untouched." It painted the prospects of the business in most glowing colors, the burden of the argument being that an additional $7,000,000 worth of business a year was assured to the company if it could obtain sufficient additional capital to increase the volume of its factory output.

Planned Other Articles. One paragraph read: "We now have in hand contracts for 40,000 electric vacuum cleaners, with an almost unlimited field for the sale of further sweepers as rapidly as they can be manufactured. Following these two articles will come several others, among them being the BlueBird electric ironing machine and the BlueBird electric household refrigerator, for both of which there will be a very large and very active demand."

As to the vacuum cleaner, one of the pamphlets said: "Although this machine is not quite ready for the market, we have contracts for the production of $1,200,000 worth of sweepers at a price that assures us a substantial profit." Elsewhere in the stock-selling "literature" mention is made of "$1,200,000 worth of BlueBird electric vacuum sweepers for which we now have orders."

Receivers Cannot Find Orders. The permanent receivers, in their investigation of the company's accounts, have been unable to find any contracts or orders for vacuum sweepers or any evidence that work had been started on them. The only recorded reference to them was in letters from the BlueBird Appliance Co., which seems to have made a survey of the selling field for electric sweepers, and to have reported that it believed there would be a market for 1,500,000 properly constructed sweepers. This survey was based on information that there were 9,000,000 homes in the United States equipped for electricity and that at least 1,500,000 of these homes had no electric sweepers in them.

The receivers have found evidence that experimental work has been done at the BlueBird factory on an ironing machine and an iceless refrigerator and that considerable sums of the company's money have been used in this experimentation. Why Stock Was Offered. The writer of the BlueBird stock-selling pamphlets had this to say as to the reason for offering stock to the general public:

"The question will arise, 'If stock in the BlueBird Manufacturing Co. is so good an investment, why is it not snapped up by the officers of the company or by big investors?' Frankly, the answer to the first question is that the officers of the company are investing every dollar they can in BlueBird stock, but their limited means make it impossible for them to handle even a majority of it."

"The answer to the second question is that we have had at least four opportunities to sell a controlling interest in BlueBird to large investors from thing altogether repugnant to the men who have been putting their lifeblood into the business."

The finding of four, or even one "big investor," would not now be so "repugnant" to the receivers who are "putting their lifeblood" into the task of raising money to pay the company's current obligations.

Liberty Bonds Sold. The receivers already have had to resort to the sale of receivers' certificates for $20,000 to pay overdue wages of the company's employees and yesterday the receivers consented to a court order by which the Central National Bank was authorized to sell $25,000 worth of Liberty Bonds which it holds as collateral for money loaned to the company. This was accepted as the only practical way of reducing the company's indebtedness to the bank. An interesting feature of the request for this order was that it stated the company's present indebtedness to the bank is $150,000.

According to an audit made by an accounting firm March 31 last, the company at that time owed the Central National Bank $127,169. Yesterday's petition for the sale of collateral shows that since March 31 the company has borrowed $22,831 from this bank.

TESTIMONY OF FORMER MRS. DEMPSEY BARRED

Court Refuses to Admit "Confidential Communications"— Questionnaire Read.

By the Associated Press.
SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—Testimony of Mrs. Maxine Dempsey, former wife of Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, in regard to confidential communications between them while they were married was ruled out, his trial here today on charges of evading the draft.

John B. Ellis, of Logan, W. Va., half brother of Dempsey's mother, Mrs. Priscilla Dempsey, testified he and his half sister jointly owned property in Logan which was in litigation for some time. The prosecution attempted to prove Ellis gave Mrs. Dempsey money for the property. Defense attorneys brought out that the litigation was not settled until after Dempsey made out his questionnaire.

Helen Goodrich of Pasco, Wash., testified Dempsey's wife at one time was a woman of the night life of Pasco.

Testimony intended to show Dempsey, in answering his draft questionnaire, declared that his wife, parents, a widowed sister and her two children were dependent upon his earnings, and thus obtained a deferred classification was offered by the Government at the opening of the trial.

Portions of a photographic copy of Dempsey's questionnaire were read, in which he stated his income in 1917 was $2500 and that he contributed $80 a month to the support of his relatives.

Rudolph Goodman, a Chicago notary, said he was called to a hotel there in 1918 and that Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, read the statements of dependency and that Dempsey verbally approved the written answers. Goodman testified that at Kearns' suggestion and with Dempsey's approval he inserted a statement that Dempsey's father, Hiram, earned $300 in 1917 at odd jobs.

Mrs. Fred Gibson testified that Hiram Dempsey paid her $13 a month for the house occupied by the family in Salt Lake City and A. A. Auerback testified that Mrs. Effie Clarkson, Dempsey's sister, earned $12 a week.

John S. Hogan, of a local draft board told of granting deferred classification to Dempsey on the showing made in his questionnaire.

H. S. McCann, city auditor of Salt Lake City, testified that Hiram Dempsey earned $475 in 1917 as a street cleaner. It was declared by the defense that part of this money was received after Dempsey's questionnaire had been filled out.

CLUBS ADVISED TO ADVERTISE U. S. AS SAFE PLACE TO SHOP

Special Counsel Addresses Advertisers, Convening in Indianapolis, on How to Keep World Trade.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 9.—"We should strive to make America known as a safe place in which to shop," declared Richard H. Lee, of New York, special counsel of the Associated Advertising Clubs, in discussing "what shall America do to hold her world trade?" at the sixteenth annual convention of the association here today. We should meet foreign conditions as far as possible. We should impose no unnecessary change in their present method of conducting their business. Above all, we should strive to be truthful in our description of the product so that there may be no disappointment upon its arrival.

"Through the medium of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the world, foreign nations have come to know America as the land of truth in advertising. Very shortly better business bureaus will be established in South America, Australia and Great Britain."

Dealing with advertising from a woman's point of view, Mrs. Christine Frederick of New York City suggested a campaign to advertise advertising to the consumers and she quoted statistics to show that most of these consumers are women. In addition "even $4 per cent of the distinguished advertising fraternity I see before me are wearing clothes chosen and bought for them by women."

"Women have universally responded to advertising," said Mrs. Frederick, "but they are as yet unconscious or uninformed as a class regarding the economic function of advertising."

COUNTY SEPTEMBER GRAND JURY CALLED AHEAD OF TIME

Judge Wurdeman of the St. Louis County Circuit Court announced today that he would call a grand jury next week. It will not be designated as a special grand jury, he said, but as the September grand jury, called "a little ahead of time." One grand jury a year is appointed in the county, usually in the fall.

"There is more deviltry in the summer months than in the fall," the judge said in explaining his reason for the call at this time. He said the method of selecting the grand jurors, whether by the County Court or by the Sheriff, had not been determined. There was talk of calling a special grand jury three months ago, because of the prevalence of gambling in the county, but nothing was done.

The disturbances lasted until early Tuesday morning.

SEARCH WARRANTS NOT NEEDED IN LIQUOR RAIDS

Judge Faris Rules Breaking Doors Is Justified if Agents Suspect Law Breaking.

Prohibition enforcement agents are not required by law to have a search warrant to raid premises where they have reason to believe there is a whisky still, and, if necessary, they can break down doors to get the evidence, according to a ruling of Federal Judge Faris in the case of Paul Raffalo, 1123 Locust street.

Raffalo had filed a motion for the return of a still and a quantity of liquor confiscated at his home by officers who had no search warrant.

Judge Faris, in denying the motion, gave a verbal opinion that as the manufacture of whisky is a felony, the agents of the Government, where there is evidence that a still is in operation, do not have to have a search warrant to get the evidence and that they are acting within the law if they have to break down doors to get the evidence.

Youth Charged With "One-Armed Driving" Makes Plea for Fishing Trip.

James Sparks, 18 years old, of 5351 Bartmer avenue, son of Charles Sparks of the Sparks Mule Co., National Stockyards, who was arrested last night on the North and South road, in St. Louis County, on a charge of "one-armed driving," was let off on the payment of $7.60 costs by Justice of the Peace Werrenmeyer at Clayton today, when he stated that $7.60 was all he had.

Sparks, who is a student at the Jackson Academy, 4365 Lindell boulevard, was with a girl whose name he would not divulge and Elmer Hennessey, 19, of 5352 Page boulevard, when Deputy Constable Roth drove up and admonished him to keep the hand that was around the girl on the steering wheel. Sparks, according to Roth, responded, "You make me," which Roth proceeded to do on the way to Clayton. The youth said he could not borrow the money for payment of a fine from his father because if his father found he was arrested, he would not let him go on a fishing trip he is contemplating.

NEGRO IDENTIFIED AS MAN WHO ATTACKED WHITE WOMAN

Andrew Banks, 28 years old, of 2007 Market street, a negro, was identified at police headquarters this afternoon by Mrs. Aravella Walters, 29 years old, 2007 Destrehan street, as a burglar who entered her home last Thursday and, after choking her into insensibility, attacked her and took her wedding ring, watch and 45 cents. The fact that Mrs. Walters had been attacked was not reported by the police at the time of the occurrence.

Banks was arrested Monday in a Market street pawnshop where he was trying to sell a suit of clothes which had been stolen from the home of Frank Richeberg, a negro, at 2021 Division street. An information charging him with burglary was issued.

Mrs. Walters and a neighbor woman visited police headquarters, and both identified the prisoner. Mrs. Walters' neighbor said she saw the negro enter and leave the Walters home through a window. Mrs. Walters' face and neck still bear bruises.

COURT SETS ASIDE CONVICTION FOR LIQUOR PRESCRIPTIONS

Holds Trial Court Erred in Considering Charges Not in Indictment of Canton, Mo., Doctor.

A conviction in the Circuit Court of Lewis County in the case of Dr. W. G. White of Canton, Mo., who was charged with unlawfully issuing prescriptions for intoxicating liquor, was set aside by the St. Louis Court of Appeals yesterday on the ground that the trial court had erred in permitting the introduction of prescriptions which were not mentioned in the indictment against the defendant.

White was charged with having issued six prescriptions to John Dance and five to Mace Whitaker. The jury found him guilty and fined him $50 for each of the 11 prescriptions, making the total amount of the fines $550.

The indictment, which was voted against White after he had returned from service in the world war, alleged that the prescriptions had been issued in 1915, which was before war-time or national prohibition went into effect. Lewis County, however, became dry, under local option, in 1912.

WIFE OF ENVER PASHA FLEES FROM TURKS IN AIRPLANE

Activity of Nationalists Causes British to Close Gulf of Ismid to Shipping.

By the Associated Press. CONSTANTINOPLE, June 9.—The Gulf of Ismid, easterly arm of the Sea of Marmora, was closed by the British yesterday to all shipping. The order was issued because of the activities of the Turkish nationalists along the shores of the gulf.

The nationalists Monday seized a Turkish airplane school near Maltepe, on the north shore of the gulf half way between Constantinople and Ismid. They captured 10 flying machines. Only three airplanes escaped. The wife of Enver Pasha, former Turkish Minister of War, is reported to have escaped in one machine carrying a quantity of money. The nationalists on Monday also seized Karah-Mussal on the south shore of the gulf.

TEACHERS TO VOTE ON ORDER TO QUIT THEIR FEDERATION

School Board Adopts Anti-Union Resolution and Opposition of High School Instructors Is Aroused.

MEASURE HELD OVER SINCE MAY MEETING

Stand to Be Taken Will Be Discussed at Meeting This Afternoon in the Central Y. M. C. A.

The High School Teachers' Association, at a meeting this afternoon at Central Y. M. C. A., will decide by vote whether they will resign their membership in the American Federation of Teachers, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The meeting was called by the president of the association, Theodore Kelsey, head assistant at the Cleveland High School, following the action of the Board of Education last night in adopting a resolution barring teachers who belong to labor unions from holding positions in the public schools.

Approximately 270 of the 340 teachers employed in the six high schools are members of the High School Teachers' Association, which, through its membership in the American Federation of Teachers, is a branch of the American Federation of Labor. The board's resolution means that unless the local organization withdraws from the American Federation of Teachers the members will be subject to immediate dismissal from their positions.

Resolution Is Opposed. In a communication to the Board of Education, the High School Teachers' Association Monday urged the defeat of the resolution, contending that the American Federation of Teachers was a national organization of worthy aims and one which used only such methods as were in keeping with the best traditions of the profession.

The publicity committee of the High School Teachers' Association, while declining to offer a prediction as to what the result of the vote to be taken this afternoon will be, stated that a majority of the members of the association were opposed to the board's attitude. The teachers as a whole, it was said, regard it as peculiar that a body of men should go on record as directing the teachers to think as the board members do, regardless of what the teachers themselves may think about it.

"The teachers are only asking to be recognized as a unit, which is a recognized American principle," the committee stated, "and it seems unfair for the board to deny them that right."

Dismissal Is Provided. The text of the resolution, which was introduced by W. Frank Carter, president of the Chamber of Commerce, at the April meeting of the board, follows:

No person shall be employed in any capacity in the Department of Instruction who is a member of a labor union or of any organization affiliated with a trade or labor union, and any person employed in the Department of Instruction who becomes a member of any such organization shall be subject to immediate dismissal. The resolution was recommended for adoption by the Committee on Instruction by a vote of 2 to 1. Labor leaders had conferred with the committee prior to its recommendation, asking that the resolution be rejected.

When the matter came up at the May meeting of the board it was laid over until the June meeting, last night, when it was passed without discussion and with only one dissenting vote, that of Richard Murphy, chairman of the Committee on Instruction.

A long list of appointments and promotions for the coming year, submitted by Supt. Withers, was approved by the board, subject to the terms of the resolution regarding affiliation with labor unions.

Miss Alice B. Ernst, a sister of Miss Lillie R. Ernst, Assistant Superintendent of Instruction, was among the grade teachers promoted from first assistant to head assistant. Cassidy Is Surprised.

Maurice J. Cassidy, secretary of the Building Trades Council, one of the labor officials who opposed the adoption of the resolution, said that the board's action was a surprise to him. He said that members of the Committee on Instruction had informed him that teachers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor were capable instructors.

Members of the board said that there was no objection to the formation of a teachers' association so long as it did not affiliate with the American Federation of Labor. The board members take the position that the teachers cannot comply with the ritual of the labor unions and still be good teachers.

4 KILLED, 100 HURT BY WINDSTORM IN MINNESOTA

Property Losses in Northern Part of State and in North Dakota Reported to Be Heavy.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 9.—At least four persons were killed, 100 or more injured and heavy property damage resulted from a severe wind and electrical storm which swept Northern Minnesota and parts of Eastern North Dakota last night, according to reports received here early today. Wire communication with most districts affected was still cut off.

The available death list includes William Hokmer, 11 years old, killed when a barn collapsed near Fergus Falls, Minn.; the 2-year-old son of a farmer named Wolsen, killed by falling tree near Grey Eagle; William Roeder, a farmer, living near Gardner, N. D., crushed when his home was demolished, and Mrs. R. N. Wilke, 50 years old, who died today from injuries suffered when her cottage near Grey Eagle collapsed.

Meager reports reaching here indicate that the storm struck heaviest in the vicinity of Foxhome, Fergus Falls and Breckenridge, Minn., and Gardner, N. D. First information was that the town of Foxhome had been wiped out, but later advices were to the effect that several buildings, including a grain elevator, were destroyed, and several people hurt, but no one killed.

Four cars of a Northern Pacific passenger train, westbound from Breckenridge, were blown from the tracks near Foxhome and about 30 persons injured, several seriously. The four cars caught fire and were destroyed. Several freight cars were swept from trains in various sections.

Many buildings on farms were damaged or destroyed. At Pine City, Minn., lightning struck a flour mill and it was destroyed, with a loss of $20,000.

MAN WANTED HERE ON CHARGE MADE BY GIRL, 14, ARRESTED

Robert Poe, 40, Insurance Agent, Who Forfeited Bond, Taken in Tennessee.

Robert Poe, 40 years old, an insurance agent, sought by police of several cities since he failed to appear in court here to answer a charge brought by a 14-year-old girl, April 15, 1918, was arrested yesterday in Clarksville, Tenn., according to a telegram. A reward of $100 has been standing for Poe's arrest since he disappeared, and forfeited his bond.

Poe was arrested on the night of Nov. 17, 1917, at the Central Hotel, 1400 Chestnut street, when in a raid, he was found with Lillian Beavers of De Soto, Mo. At that time he claimed the girl was his wife, but later admitted he had a wife and two children.

The girl told the police she came to St. Louis because Poe, when in De Soto, told her he would give her employment as a nurse girl with his wife. She came here with him two days before, she said, but instead of taking her to his home, he took her to the hotel.

The girl was placed in the House of Detention, and on Jan. 21, 1918, she was taken to the city hospital. An information was issued against Poe, and he was released on bond.

When the case was called in court the following April, he could not be found.

RABBI ABRAMOVITZ TO DEPART FOR CONFERENCE IN LONDON

Will Attend International Zionist Congress to Discuss Palestine Community Movement.

Rabbi Bernard Abramovitz of 5070 Enright avenue, chief rabbi of the Orthodox Jews of St. Louis, will depart tonight for New York, on his way to the international Zionist conference to be held in London for several weeks, beginning July 6. A notable party of American Jews is said to be preparing to sail on the steamer Lapland Saturday to attend the conference.

Establishment of the Zionist community in Palestine, under the recent authorization of the peace conference, will be the principal subject of the conference. A modern program of Government is under consideration for the community.

EGYPTIAN HUSTLERS TO MEET

The Egyptian Hustlers will hold their eighteenth annual meeting at Carbondale, Ill., beginning tomorrow and continuing through Saturday. The slogan of the meet will be: "Greater Farm Production and Dairy Farming."

A white-suit parade, automobile parade and entertainment features are scheduled for tomorrow. Prof. William Leonidas Burlison of the University of Illinois and Carl J. Baer of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce will be among the speakers Friday. Besides the lectures, there will be athletic events, a Hustlers' ball and a street Mardi Gras. On Saturday the business of the meeting will be concluded.

Passage Granted to 85 Planes. By the Associated Press. SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, June 9.—Passage over Spain for 85 French airplanes sent to Morocco has been authorized by the Spanish Government, according to announcement here.

"STRONG MEN" WOULD DUST G. O. P. LEADERS

Former Judge Reynolds Starts Move to Remove Babler, Cole and Morse.

A number of St. Louis Republicans not now active in the local organization are making an effort to get together a sufficient number to make a move to oust State Chairman Cole and National Committeeman Babler and put an end to the reign of "Liv" Morse and the Schmoll-Goldstein-Morse outfit.

Matt G. Reynolds, former Circuit Judge, announced last night that he is willing to be one of the "strong men" to go down the line and clean up "this undesirable group," but he does not want to stand alone against the undesirables. He suggested that if such men as Leo Rasch and A. L. Shupleigh would join in the movement, there would soon be a large enough following to oust the crowd now in power.

Will Call Meeting.
A meeting will be held in a few days, he said, at which the movement to purge the party of undesirable bosses will take definite form. The plan favored in informal discussion, Reynolds says, is to call a mass meeting under the auspices of 30 prominent Republicans and disavow the acts of Babler and Morse, Cole, Goldstein and others, including E. E. McJimsey, who wants to be Governor, who have achieved notoriety in connection with the Lowden campaign fund.

"The Missouri delegates who took Lowden money," he said, "are a stench to the nation at present, and all has resulted from the actions of these petty politicians. They have acquired leadership in the State and City Committees, shutting out the better elements, and have utilized their offices solely to their own advantage."

"Such men as Babler should be absolutely thrown out of power, for they are beating down the great Republican power which we have spent many years to build up. The Republican organization here practically had the offices of Governor and all prominent positions filled."

Preliminary Conference Held.
A preliminary meeting was held last night which was attended by Reynolds, City Collector Koehn and others.

Mayor Kiel today said he had taken no part in the campaign to elect delegates to the Republican national convention and he was not going to take part in a movement to oust anybody. He was busy with municipal affairs, he said, and did not have time for such things.

Collector Koehn said he was happy that such Republicans as Reynolds and Shupleigh were interesting themselves in clean politics and party success and were willing to get together and clean out the whole crowd. He said he was not going to be for any candidate who recanted money. He predicted that when a mass meeting is held there will be a large attendance of representative Republicans who will not stand for what has been going on.

Shupleigh, who is St. Louis campaign fund representative for the Republican National Committee, says he will join in a movement for a housecleaning in the party.

Charles Nagel, Secretary of Commerce and Labor in President Taft's Cabinet and a former Republican leader, said today he would aid in the movement to oust the Missouri Republicans involved in the Lowden fund scandal. He declared that any committeeman or delegate who accepted money from a candidate was unfit to hold office.

DETROIT STREET RAILWAY COMPANY ADOPTS 6-CENT FARE

Corporation Counsel for City Announces He Will Seek Injunction to Hold Rate at 5 Cents.

By the Associated Press.
DETROIT, June 9.—Further court action in the street railway difficulty here is in prospect today as a result of the break between the city and the Detroit Railway Co. over the question of fares.

The company today began collecting 6-cent cash fares and selling tickets at five for 30 cents or nine for 50 cents, while Corporation Counsel Wilcox announced he was preparing to seek an injunction restraining the company from charging more than 5 cents.

Mayor James Couzens had urged car riders to refuse to pay the "6-cent, nine for 50" rate which was agreed upon last week, after the company announced it would sell six tickets for 30 cents, an arrangement not provided for in the agreement. The company's action, the Mayor contended, would place it in a position to exact a straight 6-cent fare if it chose to do so.

RAILROADS AND SHIPPERS ASKED TO WORK TOGETHER

A program for co-operation between the railroads and shippers has been outlined by a joint committee of the Chamber of Commerce, Traffic Bureau and of the St. Louis Car Service Commission.

Shippers will be asked to restrict their car orders to the requirements of each day, so as to minimize the delays on sidings. They are asked to avoid duplicating car orders with different roads. Expeditious loading and unloading of cars is requested, also that cars be loaded to their utmost capacity.

By a general following of this program, it is hoped to relieve the situation which has resulted from the insurgent switchmen's strike, beginning April 8, and from the shortage of cars.

ATLANTA, GA.ATTORNEY FOR CITY
REPORTS ON BUSCH
RAIL FRANCHISESManufacturers' Company
Found Not to Have Made
Payment to City Required
Under Ordinances.

A reply to the inquiry made in March by Comptroller Nolte, as to the sums due to the city from the Manufacturers' Railway (Busch line), under the franchise ordinance of 1905, either as payments under the franchise or penalty for non-fulfillment of work, was made public today by the City Counselor's office.

At the time the inquiry was begun, it appeared that $50,000 or more was due to the city. William Cotter, president of the Manufacturers' Railway, made a statement at that time declaring that the work of construction was delayed by injunction proceedings and other causes which are recognized in the ordinance, as acceptable reasons for delay, and as suspending the provisions for payment to the city.

The construction of the Second street tracks, from Potomac street to Poplar street, authorized in one of the Manufacturers' Railway ordinances, has never been completed, and the construction of the northern part of this line was lately resumed.

Special Attorney's Report.
City Counselor Dues, in his reply to the Comptroller, states that he requested Oliver T. Johnson, a special attorney for the Department of Public Utilities, to investigate the matter, and that Johnson had submitted a report to him. Dues approves Johnson's report. The Comptroller had asked only as to money due the city, and not as to possible forfeitures of the company's franchises, but Johnson, in his reply, treats the matter of franchise forfeiture, which is closely involved with the other.

Johnson's report, as approved by Dues, states that if the Second street track of the Manufacturers' Railway was completed and ready for operation April 13, 1908, a payment of $5000 a year thereafter, by the company, became due to the city.

In case the track was in operation by April 13, 1918, he further says, the amount due became $10,000 a year. But, in case there was a default in either payment or construction, the franchise was forfeited, and the requirement of car fares and other river work was eliminated.

Delays Specified in Ordinance.
Furthermore, the attorney says, if the track was uncompleted and unready for operation April 13, 1908, a payment of $25,000 damages in liquidation became due to the city, and the part of the track north of Lynch street became the city's property—provided, that the work had not been delayed by litigation, strikes or other causes beyond the company's control, as provided in the franchise ordinance.

If there was such delay, it would also extend the time when the annual payments became due, the report says.

There is also a possible $25,000 due as damages for failure to complete the required river work by April 13, 1910. This matter is also subject to the question of legitimate delays.

Delays to Be Investigated.
The City Counselor said he would ask Director Hooke of the Department of Public Utilities to make an investigation, and see what delay, of a kind recognized by the franchise ordinance as legitimate, had occurred. In case he should find, in this way, that the franchise had been forfeited, the next step might be a quo warranto proceeding. Such a proceeding would require the Mayor's approval.

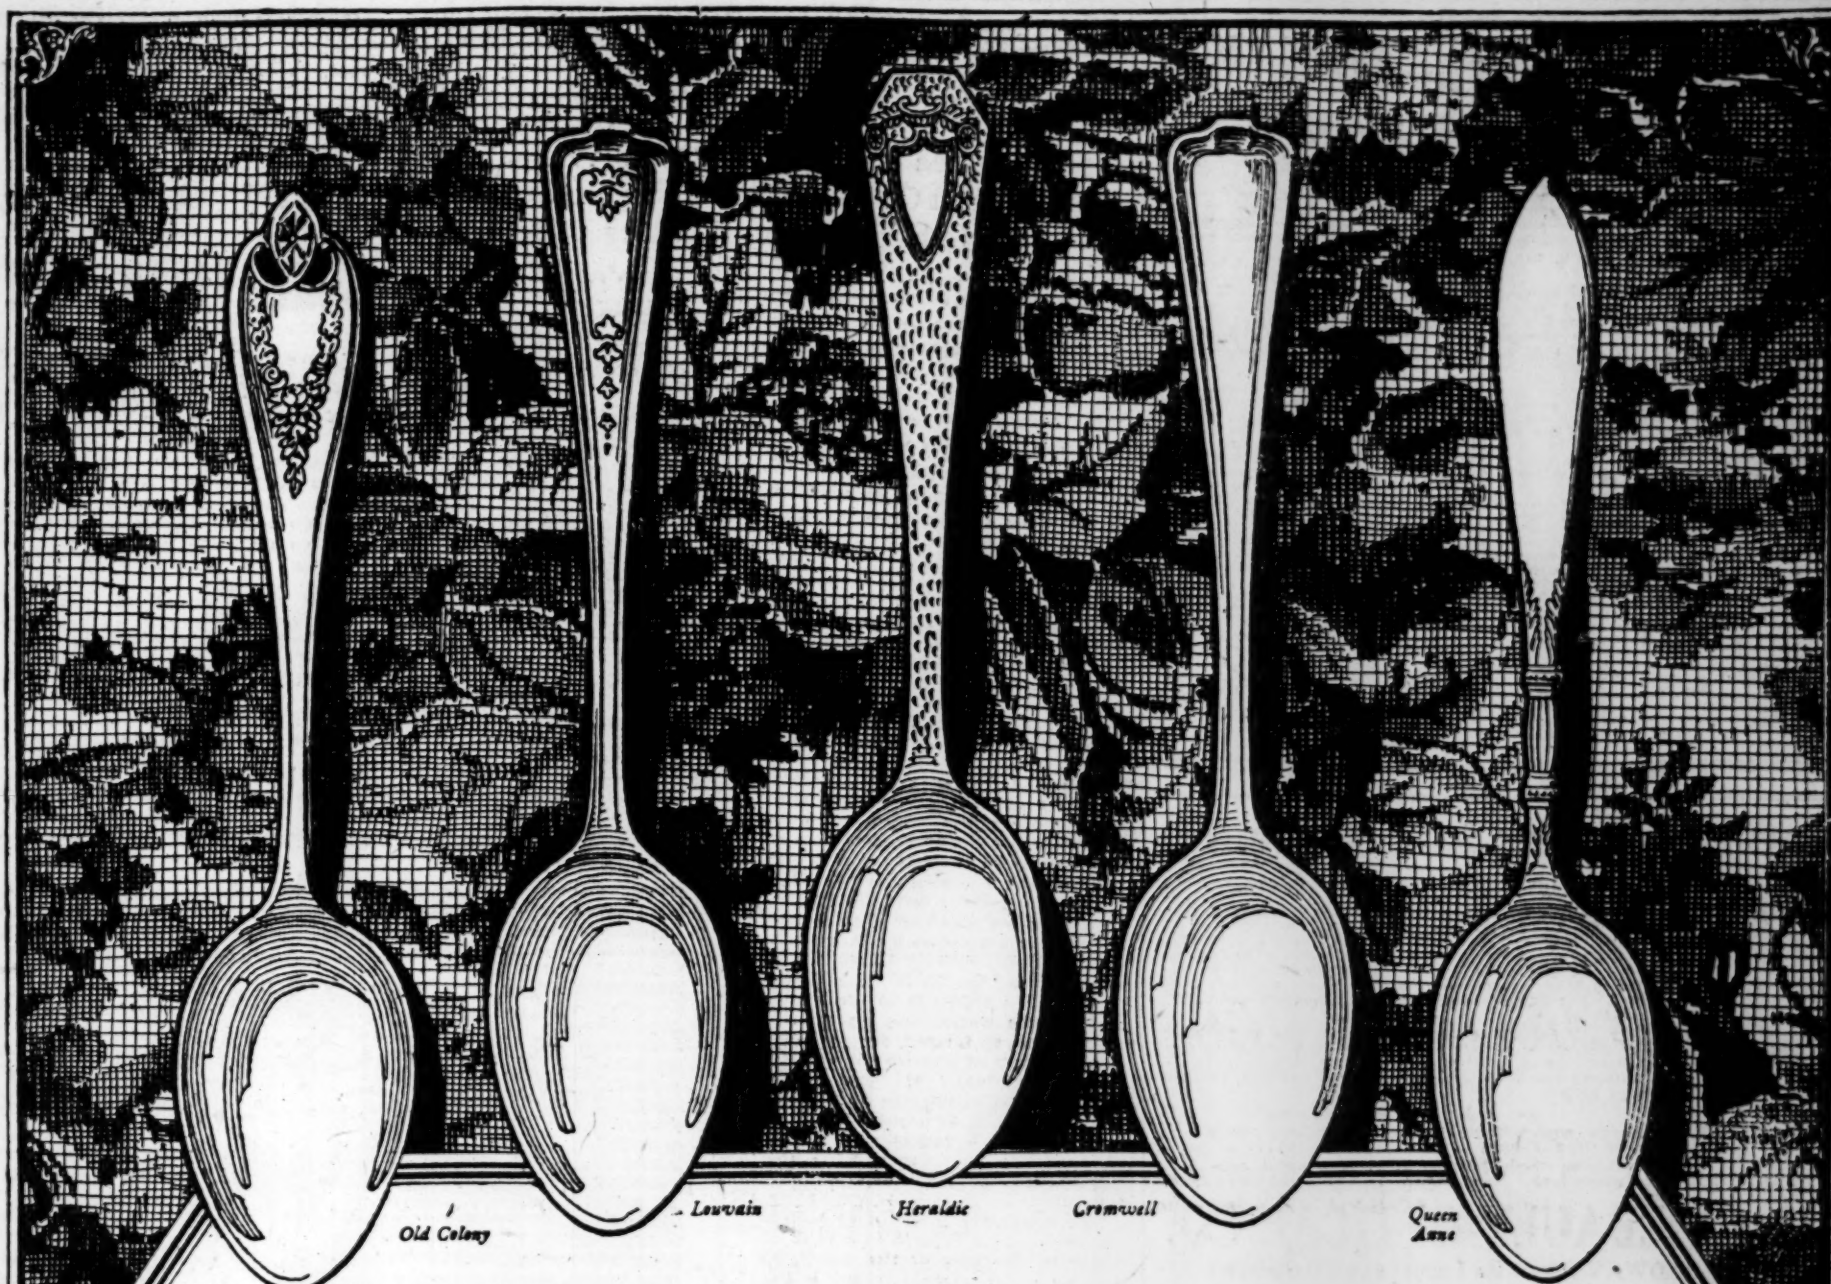

Mayor Kiel said, when asked about the matter, that he would not favor taking any action which would deprive shippers of the switching service which the Manufacturers line is now furnishing them. "If any money is owing to the city, it should be paid," he said, "but it is not desirable to revoke franchises in this case. I think the City Counselor should confer with the representatives of the company, with a view to new ordinances, if new provisions are needed to enable the company to continue the service it is now giving."

RECEPTION TO BE GIVEN
FOR MRS. O'HARE TOMORROWProceeds of Affair at Odeon Will Be Used in Providing Vacation for Her and Four Children.

The first public appearance of Mrs. Kate Richards O'Hare since she was released from prison by presidential commutation of her sentence, will be at the Odeon tomorrow night, when a homecoming reception will be given in her honor by Socialist and non-Socialist friends.

When she left St. Louis for the Jefferson City prison, 15 months ago, to begin serving her five-year term for violation of the wartime espionage act, she received a tremendous demonstration at the Odeon. It being necessary to hold an overflow meeting in another hall. This will be her first public talk in St. Louis since then. She will speak on amnesty for political prisoners, and on her contemplated work for prison reform.

W. M. Brandt, secretary-treasurer of the local Socialist organization, said today that half the tickets for the reception have been sold in advance. He also made known that the receipts will be used in providing a vacation for Mrs. O'Hare and her four children.

Find out which pattern she has selected

The bride to be has her own ideas of silverware beauty. Undoubtedly she has already selected the one 1847 Rogers Bros. pattern which appeals to her. Find out what this is and make your gifts in the same design. Even if she already has the usual tea-spoons, knives and forks, she would be delighted with a special serving piece such as a cold meat fork, berry spoon or cake knife.

A Tea or Coffee Set or a Tray or Vase, in the same design as the spoons and other pieces, would be truly a magnificent gift—and in making it several friends could unite. This harmony between all the pieces in a silver service is distinctive of 1847 Rogers Bros. Silverware. For more than seventy years this silverware has been noted for its attractiveness and durability. That is why your grandmother and mother chose it for their homes—that is why they would recommend it for all new home-makers.

Leading dealers have 1847 Rogers Bros. Silverware on display or can get it for you. Make a note in your Gift Book to make an early selection of patterns.

When you ask your dealer for one or the other of the two Rogers brands here mentioned, ask for them by full name to avoid confusion.

STOCK MARKET DUEL; RAILWAY SHARES DECLINE

Index Number Shows Great Decrease in Commodity Prices Since 1919.

By Leased Wire From The New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 9.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted financial review today says:

"Notwithstanding continued high call money rates, 10 per cent was quoted in the afternoon—today's stock market moved very little. In the early trading railway shares were weak and industrials generally strong. But trading was extremely dull and the market closed quiet. Following the London Economist's decrease in its English commodity price average during May and April, Bradstreet's index number of the American average on June 1, published today, showed for last month the largest decline of any single month since February, 1919. The index of Dun's review shows increase during May in the average price of metals, meat and breadstuffs, but substantial decrease in clothing, dairy products and other food than meat or grain.

"Exchange rates on Europe were slightly firmer; the rise in sterling somewhat helped by cable reports of a statement by the Chancellor of the British Exchequer that half of England's share of the Anglo-French maturity in next October was already provided for, through balances created in America.

"German Bank Statement. "The Bank of Germany's statement of May 31 showed $222,300,000 increase in note circulation for the week, making 5,000,000,000 in increase since the end of 1919. Currency inflation on this scale means either repudiation or deliberate scaling down, when Germany really undertakes to restore her economic position. At present it probably means nothing more to the Germans themselves than did the recent Reichsbank annual report with its figures of a 1919 'turn-over' of 5,877,000,000 in the next October, 1918 and 14 times as large as 1913. These are figures like the old French assignats.

"The exceptionally violent fall in silver bullion yesterday was not followed by any recovery. On the contrary, the London price fell 2 1/2 pence further to 45 1/2 pence per ounce, which is actually only a fraction more than one-half of the February maximum. As was to be supposed, the New York silver market was demoralized. The theory is plausible enough, that the silver speculators misinterpreted the clause of the Fittman act which requires the Treasury to buy at $1 an ounce as much silver as it sells in melted-up dollars. As a matter of fact, the law restricts such purchases to the product of American mining, and what is more to the point, it empowers the Treasury to resell even such purchased silver 'for the purpose of facilitating the settlement of trade balances adverse to the United States.' But everyone except the infatuated speculator has known this since April, 1918.

"Government Crop Report. "Not much attention was paid by Wall street to the Government's crop report as given out late yesterday afternoon; yet there were some striking facts in it. The raising of the estimate on probable winter wheat yield to 804,000,000 bushels as against April's estimate of 844,000,000 was almost wholly due to an increase of 14,500,000 for Kansas and of 3,500,000 for Nebraska. The reason for these larger expectations was given in the Kansas State report of two weeks ago. Acreage supposed to be winter killed, which would ordinarily have been plowed up for corn, could not be so disposed of this year, because of labor shortage. Therefore a special effort was made to save the so-called 'abandoned acreage' and with unexpected success. Except for 1919, the present indicated wheat crop of Kansas is now the largest of any since the war began.

"But the labor shortage, which thus curiously helped the winter wheat crop in its later stages, served to cut down spring wheat planting by 3,000,000 acres, and the total indicated wheat yield is 149,000,000 bushels under last year's actual harvest. Even so, however, it would exceed the total yield of 1917 or 1918, and would run beyond any harvest of years before the war."

NORTHWESTERN HAS SLUMP. WHEN DIVIDENDS ARE CUT

Preferred Stock of Road Has Long Been on Basis of 8 Per Cent.

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 9.—Dividends on the preferred common shares of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Co. were reduced at a meeting of the directors in this city yesterday. The rate on the preferred stock was cut from 4 to 3 1/2 per cent semi-annually, while the common stock suffered a reduction from 3 1/2 to 2 1/2 per cent.

Chicago & Northwestern is an important part of the Vanderbilt system and the action of the directors necessitated. It was declared, by transportation conditions, came as a complete surprise. This was reflected in the course of the shares on the Stock Exchange, the common taking a maximum decline of 10 1/2 points to 70 1/2 on relatively heavy selling, while the preferred stock broke 10 points to 103 on one sale of 100 shares.

Chicago & Northwestern has long been regarded as one of the prime investment issues in the railway division. The preferred stock has been on an 8 per cent basis for over a generation, while the common stock returned 7 per cent to its holders for the last 15 years.

The action of the Northwestern directors is the first of its kind among high-grade rails since their release from Federal control.

FIRMER TONE SHOWN IN TRADING ON CURB

Oils Inactive, but Steady—Profit Taking Causes Reaction in Industrials.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 9.—A firmer tone was displayed on the curb market today and business was more active than in the last few days. The price movements were narrow.

White oil was rather inactive, but held steady. Dealings were large in inland oil, but the stock moved with narrow limits. Rushing was the active feature of the lower priced shares.

Price changes were small in the miscellaneous list. Profit-taking sales caused a late reaction, but there were good supporting orders.

Mining shares were moderately active. Bonds were quiet, with price changes irregular.

SNAPSHOTS AT THE CHICAGO CONVENTION

Senator Borah after he arrived in Chicago to fight for nomination of his friend Senator Hiram Johnson.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, daughter-in-law and daughter of the former President, who are deeply interested in the outcome.

Thomas K. Niedringhaus of St. Louis and S. A. Kent of St. Joseph.

Oyden L. Mills, of the committee which will draft the platform on which the Republican candidate will go before the people.

An unusually good snapshot of Senator Lodge, the dapper gentleman from Massachusetts.

Senator Harding of Ohio (on ground) arrives with Senator Calder of New York.

Nicholas Murray Butler extends a friendly hand to Frank Hitchcock, one of Gen. Wood's managers.

A fragment of the "Old Guard" still intact—Murray Crane of Massachusetts, T. Coleman Dupont of Delaware and Gordon A. Ramsay of Illinois.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

Another Income Tax Estimate.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
Referring to editorial "How Much Income Tax Refund?"

1. Computing depends on whether person is single or married. If single, State should refund 1 1/2 per cent on $1000 or $15 for additional exemption, or if married, State should refund 1 1/2 per cent on $2000 or $30 for additional exemption.

2. State should refund 40 per cent of amount, after $15 single or $30 married has been deducted from incorrect assessed bills.

Examples:
Tax paid on incorrect bill.....$ 15.00
1. Deduct 1 1/2 per cent on $1000..... 15.00

2. Nothing left to deduct 40 per cent.
(Your example)

Incorrect tax bill.....$ 15.00
Correct amount..... Nil

Amount of refund.....$ 15.00

Married:
Tax paid on incorrect bill.....$153.42

1. Deduct 1 1/2 per cent on $2000..... 80.00

2. Deduct 40 per cent..... 49.37

Correct amount of tax.....$ 74.05

Incorrect tax bill.....$153.42

Correct tax bill..... 74.05

Amount of refund.....$ 79.37

The above computation takes full account of the exemptions.

Raising 'Em Right.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I beg to take issue with L. M. C. in regard to letter on "Chicken farming in the city not humane."

The business is the most pleasant and profitable one could interest himself in.

The sour soil spoken of can easily be remedied by turning same under each week, then sprinkle lightly with crushed lime each week or two.

Lack of shade can be remedied by planting morning glories, or moon vines on the south side of poultry netting.

Lice infected sheds should be cleaned by sprinkling chloride of lime on roosts and drop boards, and spraying walls of hen house with coal oil each week.

Greens can be fed in abundance from scraps from the table, and a perfect balanced ration can be fed by obtaining a mixture of meat scrap, bran, shipstuffs and cornmeal in proper proportions at any feed store at small expense. Ditto gravel and limestone.

Placing a crock of fresh water twice daily in the shade insures drink that is often superior to that which poultry obtain on the natural range.

The outbuildings can be made healthy and comfortable with little effort and expense as grown poultry do not require and should never have artificial heat.

In regard to reading the Government reports, will say that bulletins on this subject will be cheerfully sent for the asking, either by the Government or the Missouri State Experimental Station at Mountain Grove, Mo.

The bill before the Board of Aldermen to wipe out the backyard poultry farm should be vigorously opposed as it takes away from many of us the pleasure of making faces at Old Man H. C. L. in the form of fresh eggs and fried chicken in abundance where otherwise we must pay exorbitant prices or do without.

Instead, the bill should be amended to provide that all poultry plants must register, and be compelled to put their places in a sanitary condition.

O. J. WENZEL.

"Love Me, Love My Dog."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

My dog is the fourth member of our family. She has her bed, a yard to run in, plenty to eat and occasionally a bath, and in the same tub that we all use, too, by the way. Sometimes, owing to the H. C. L., when our meals are slim I purchase extra cats for her, and while it is added expense, she must eat, and I do not begrudge the amount expended. I am very particular that my dog does not run on the street. She enjoys perfect freedom in our backyard, under fence, and a license on her collar.

Being a lover of dogs, I do not mean to state that I believe in being filled with stray animals. It is the fault of dog owners that this happens. The poor, dumb creatures would much rather have a home, even if they had to sleep in a shed or basement with only a rug or sack to lie on. When little, helpless, blind puppies are born into this world, and they are not wanted, why can't the owners purchase a small amount of chloroform and put them to sleep? It is quick and painless, and then what a lot of suffering is eradicated.

Here's one that is a friend to the dog, yesterday, today and tomorrow, and if I had the power I would provide a way to destroy the unfortunate ones at the pound other than suffocation, a most terrible death. Mr. Man, where's your heart? I'll venture to say it is marble.

HAVE MERCY.

LODGE'S CANNED KEYNOTE.

If the keynote of the Republican campaign for the presidency was accurately sounded by Senator Lodge, the party is poverty-stricken in ideas and ideals. Senators Lodge's principal offerings were war, destruction, partisanship and hatred.

He was clear on one thing—Mexico. His solution of the Mexican problem is force. We are to see that a strong man is elected chief executive and that order is restored and maintained. We are to take vengeance for outrages committed against Americans during the revolutionary turmoil of the last few years and use the strong arm on our distracted neighbor. No account is taken of reason or experience or our own expressed democratic principles. Force is the only solution and all in the sacred name of the Monroe Doctrine.

When did the Monroe Doctrine, a declaration against interference with the political independence of nations of the Western hemisphere, come to mean our interference with their political independence and our setting up and maintaining strong governments for them, or our policing of them? This will be news to our Southern neighbors. The logic which protects Latin America from old-world interference in order that we may have a free hand to intervene is precious stuff.

The Senator was clear enough on the subject of the peace treaty and the League, but the keynote was canned music from the phonograph. It was the chant of partisanship and rancor which has reverberated in the Senate since Mr. Wilson started for Paris. The treaty which he calls Wilson's, although all the allied nations joined in shaping and ratifying it, must be wrecked. The League of Nations, which he called Wilson's league, although all the allied nations joined in shaping and adopting it, must be changed and "Americanized," which is a mere euphemism for Republicanized.

Beyond a short list of legislative measures which were passed in the interim of partisan jockeying, and on which there was little party difference, the burden of the Senator's speech was partisanship and hate. All the costs and mistakes of the war were due to Wilson. He destroyed American prestige in Europe and alienated our allies by bringing their treaty over here. He was wholly responsible for the failure of peace. He was responsible for the high cost of living. He and all his supporters, disciples, friends, relations—all who have said a good word for him—must be rooted out of American politics and American Government. The Republican party has been right and will do right, because it is Republican. It embraces all wisdom and righteousness. The Democratic party has been wrong and will do wrong because it is Democratic. It contains all evil and folly.

What bromidical guff to feed out to the American people as the best that a great political party can offer at a time when national unity on a program of international co-operation for peace and economic reconstruction at home and abroad is imperatively demanded.

We indulge the hope that the party which is assuming leadership in this post-war crisis will find something better to offer the nation than the fossilized partisanship, exploded strong-armism and reactionary obstruction that Senator Lodge has handed out.

There is not a note of progressive inspiration and definite constructiveness in his message.

"BOOM-BLOWING" BY BABLER.

National Committeeman Babler says he is coming back to Missouri from Chicago "to blow up a number of booms." His own secret deals having been made known, he seemingly is prepared to make known the secret deals of other leaders of his party. He can't begin his blowing-up activities any too early and can't pursue them with too little reserve. Let us have the facts. If his revelations as to others avail as much for the public enlightenment as the revelations respecting himself, they will, indeed, be valuable.

It is computed that some $10,000 put into Mr. Babler's hands still remains unaccounted for. We know where he got it. Possibly it is his purpose to tell what he did with it.

A POLITICAL CRISIS.

The men who have been trying to make Presidents inform us that it costs 5 cents to send a letter to a prospective voter, and since there are 17,000,000 male voters in the United States it may readily be seen that just one communication would cost pretty close to a million dollars.

Such calculation takes on a livelier interest in view of the fact the women will soon have the ballot. The number of voters will then be increased to 30,000,000 or more, which means that our future Gen. Woods will have to discover, not one, but a flock of Col. Proctors.

Idealists may say that the appearance of women at the polls will obviate many expenditures which bosses or leaders, as the case may be, think necessary. But those hard and seasoned veterans of many campaigns cannot be deceived by such sophistry. They know it is no more possible for two to vote as cheap as one than it is for two to live as cheap as one.

What remedy, if any, is available is difficult to perceive. Manifestly, nobody who values his peace of mind, be he leader or rank-and-filer, will suggest that women give up the ballot. Yet something must be done. In the name of political economy, shall we have to take the ballot away from the men?

GEN. WOOD'S QUALIFICATIONS.
Major-General Wood has a reputation for administrative genius. Upon that reputation his strength as a presidential candidate rests. It may fairly be said that Gen. Wood has given little evidence of administrative skill in his canvass for the presidential nomination.

The movement to nominate Gen. Wood started out under the management of John T. King of Connecticut, who, as a politician of experience and parts and as intimate friend of the late Col. Roosevelt, seemed ideally fitted for the post. But King, after getting the work apparently well organized, was suddenly deposed in favor of Col. Proctor, the multimillionaire soap manufacturer. The reason for the change is not publicly known, but from the facts developed by the Senate inquiry into primary finances it may be inferred that Proctor was chosen because of his ability to provide money in unlimited quantities.

Shortly after Proctor's succession Mr. Frank Hitchcock, a professional Warwick, appeared at Wood headquarters, and presently rumors filtered out as to differences between Hitchcock and Proctor—as to which of them was really first in command. Those rumors have been denied, yet the impression persists that harmony has been lacking in the Wood camp.

The latest instance of incompetent leadership in the Wood canvass was the intemperate attack on the Republican National Committee by Senator Moses of New Hampshire, a high officer in the Wood forces. The Moses diatribe was promptly disavowed by Wood headquarters, but the incident, nevertheless, is further proof of the fact of inadequate leadership. The score, of course, would not be complete without reference to the refusal of Gen. Wood's campaign managers to observe what may be called the vested rights of favorite sons who are bona fide contestants. The Wood invasion of Illinois and Ohio, where Gov. Lowden and Senator Harding respectively were exempt from competition, according to custom, was poor political sportsmanship, to say the least.

The whole record seems to indicate that politics is not Gen. Wood's métier. In military affairs and duties, where orders are peremptory and are carried out without question, Leonard Wood may be a rare executive. The presidency, however, is not a military office, for all its great authority.

There is nothing in the management of his primary to recommend Gen. Wood for the high preferment he seeks.

REGULATING BRIDGE TOLLS.

Investigations by the city's legal department shows that the Secretary of War is empowered under the congressional act to determine disputes arising over the operation of the McKinley Line bridge properties. Efforts will be made to obtain action by the Secretary on the company's proposal to increase bridge tolls on general traffic by a large percentage, amounting in some instances to almost twice former tolls.

What the excuse for profiteering is in this instance should be ascertained. It can hardly be the increased cost of bridge materials. The structure was completed some years ago, at a time so advantageous that it was built at less cost than any of the other trans-Mississippi structures. Does the higher wage of a few tollists justify the proposed advance?

The city should find out what its rights are. Bridge tolls regulated by the beneficiaries of the tolls, the bridge owners, hardly involves a sound idea in fixing the charges the public should pay.

ENTERPRISING RUSSIAN PEASANTS.

The Russian peasant, popularly supposed to be a compound of ignorance and stupidity, is proving himself equal to the terrible economic crisis that resulted from the war and the Bolshevik industrial overturn. According to the London Economist, "the peasants have in great measure supplanted the towns as industrial producers, and are even on the way to create a new capitalist industry on the lines on which capitalist industry originally arose."

Before the modern industrial era with its factory system arose, each Russian village had its own manufactures. Modern historians have asserted that the Russian peasant is naturally a trader and craftsman rather than a farmer. At the present time the village artisans are not only supplying their immediate neighbors with tools and implements, but trading in these articles with other villages and even selling them to the people of the cities. In order to get iron and steel, however, they have in many instances torn up railways and utilized the iron roofing of buildings.

The stimulus for this revival of home crafts is the fact that the industries seized and nationalized by the Bolshevik Government have been unable so far to fill the demand for those tools and implements the peasant must have in order to farm. And while the peasant is about it, he is undertaking to make not only tools, but nails, knives, cookstoves and other things needed in town as well as village.

And so Russian industry is slowly reviving, in spite of Bolshevik handicaps. It is not an ideal condition, but contains an element of hope. At any rate, it disproves the forecasts of pessimists who foresaw a breakdown of civilization. Villagers who can not only create their own implements, but supply the cities, are not in immediate danger of reverting to savagery.

So there we are, as Thrasymachus says, which is about where we were on this day of the week in 1912. One of the comedies of the convention is the way Br'er Hearst is gassing it with the Cosmopolitan staff. He is for H. and has brought even Fannie Hurst and Charles Edward Russell on to gas the old guard. He has both Bryan and Borah in his line-up. Twice daily this formidable host attacks, and for a while it looked like H. in a walk. However, after the wind from the lake freshens and everybody on the other side gets out of his gas mask the thing looks like a runaway for the Slope crowd. One of these Hearstists—really the best of them in a way—is Arthur Whitehair. You should hear Polemarus tell about Arthur, who inveighs heavily day after day against big money, though not so long ago caught with Brewer Freylinhausen behind his own wet Washington Times. Is it any wonder that almost nobody here cares to eat the first stone at Moore and Goldstein, the Goldust Twins?

The people who got the Coliseum in shape must have guessed the speakers would have mighty little to say, since the devices for multiplying that little into much are beyond anything we have seen. When Senator Lodge spoke his none-too-robust tones were fired into the remote corners of the hall as if shot from a gun. The invocation, delivered in the full round tones of a Kentucky Bishop, couldn't have fallen short of whither they were addressed.

JUST A MINUTE AT CHICAGO.

CHICAGO.—Socrates says the Democrats were shrewder than they seemed when they gave Frisco their convention, since what is going on here at Chicago this week can hardly fail to disaffect the Republicans of the Slope. Only the nomination of H. Johnson at the Coliseum this week can render the location of the Democratic convention unstrategic, and if the two per cent can help it H. is not going to be nominated. The two per cent usually can prevent this sort of thing at the Republican convention, and all Chicago is filled with the lusty cry of the Johnsonists, that its emissaries are here now for this very purpose. Louis Seibold of the World discovered the whole bunch over at the Blackstone Monday night, and the Johnsonists are madder than hornets. Br'er Bryan is warning everybody that the host of harmony in the party made at the opening of the convention by Br'er Hays has not been true since last Saturday. Mark says the breach is wide open again, and he thinks anything may happen before the end of the week.

Mr. Antwine says the difference between the keynote sounded by Br'er Lodge and the discord sounded upon the prior evening by H. and Borah is a sufficient difference to wreck the party's chance for victory, and that is the general impression among onlookers. The reservations crowd says the opposing camps will not come to blows, but H. and Borah breathed a brand of defiance at the Auditorium on Monday night that outdid even the famous spirit of rebellion exhibited in 1912 by the followers of T. R.

At any rate, the situation has become one commanding the best efforts of our two-story thinkers, and they are all hard at work on it. Glaucon came in on yesterday with an assurance from somebody or other that the Johnsonists are really not half so uncompromising as they seem, but the general opinion among our top wits is that they are even more so. The Johnsonists command an advantage in this, that they have an idea. The reservationists are merely in negation of what the President wants. There is a nebulous position somewhere between tweedledee and tweedledum. Not so the Johnsonists. They stand squarely and unreservedly against the whole league idea. Both H. and Borah are saying so, and as the clarity of their position asserts its advantage day by day they say so louder.

They tell us in the same breath that the Republicans are holding an unbossed convention and that "they" will never take Hoover. If the convention is unbossed, who can "they" be?

The convention applauded Mr. Bryan when he entered the press stand. The party was united against him in several campaigns, and it can't forget it.

The reason we have so much trouble with automobiles in downtown St. Louis is not that we have too many, but too few pedestrians. Chicago doesn't have any such trouble. When pedestrians start across the streets here they engulf automobiles as so much water might. Machines proceed when the flood passes. There is no other way for them. Whichever side has the majority rules. Here pedestrians are in the majority. When they want to cross a street they cross it. With us it is the opposite. We need more people. There is plenty of safety in numbers.

THREE WORDS.

BELOVED! I love thee! What a drama! Completion writ that those three words. An act.

Whose stateliness is measured by itself And echoes through the scenery of the soul. So it goes on as life goes on: I love thee! There is no music in Truth's theater. No chords of recompense, no loyalty. Unless those words are in the audience. But if they are, and on the stage as well, the strangest secretaries of life applaud in ecstasy, chasing away earth's woes. Before the prologue of Love's sympathy.

And when the play is over and curtain falls, When every declaration is expressed, No skilled phrases echo on the dome Or monuments of Time a sentence to Outlive the resonance of that—I love thee! Look on through years, look out upon the ways Appointed by the world, but hear—I love thee! It is in all the tales, lifelong, death-long. So right, so beautiful, what were it else? Love spells our day-dawn in eternity. Our sunrise 'round the sapphire cup of heaven.

PROBLEM FOR PEACE CONFERENCE.

RAYMOND B. FOSBICK in Atlantic Monthly.

THOUGH a year and a half has elapsed since the armistice, manufacturers in Central Europe are still without raw materials. Cotton, wool and rubber—to mention only three of the principal commodities required by Germany, Austria and Poland—are practically unobtainable there, with the consequence that, even if there were coal to run the factories, there would be nothing for them to work on. The dislocation in the rates of exchange has disorganized the markets and destroyed the basis of international trade. Rotterdam is choked with cotton, and the Port of London is full of wool for which there are no buyers, because the unbalanced exchange makes it impossible for her to pay for them. The absence of the United States from the peace conference makes the solution of the problem all the more difficult; indeed, some believe that it makes it impossible; but there can be no further delay, for the crisis is real and catastrophic. Income ahead unless remedial measures can be put in motion.

URGENT NEED OF GERMANY.

BERNHARD DERNBURG in Berlin Tageblatt.

IF we are to resume production, we have got to have coal and raw materials. Unless we do resume production, we cannot possibly pay the Entente what we have agreed to pay. But mere willingness to work and means to work with do not constitute production. We must have a third thing—credit. We can never receive credit if the Entente imposes upon us annual payments which render us nationally insolvent and prevent our ever balancing our budget. It must bear in mind that the principal purpose is of restoring our public finances to a sound basis is to stop the present ruinous inflation. We have now at least 100,000,000 marks of paper in circulation. What is there behind it? Nothing but our national credit. Deplete the Government of its ability to pay the annual interest and its debts, and you deprive our money of its value. You bring to the ground with a crash every one of our credit institutions, and the result will be to paralyze production.

WAGES FOR CONVICTS.

From the Survey.

SPEAKERS who believe in effective industrial training for prisoners dwell upon the importance of paying prisoners wages also, before the National Committee on Prisons and Prison Labor in New York City last week. One reason given was that prisoners need an incentive, just as do other people, if they are to render a conscientious day's work; another was that unless both the prisoner and his family are to suffer from poverty, in addition to his incarceration, a wage is necessary. At present, it was pointed out, a prisoner is, industrially, little better than a slave; the State takes not only his freedom, which it is justified in doing, but also his labor; it deprives him of his earning power and makes no recompense to him or his family. That imprisonment, under these circumstances, often falls with heaviest burden upon his family and that it is they who become the real sufferers from his punishment, since their source of livelihood is cut off, was the argument advanced. If wages should be paid to prisoners and if some portion of these should be devoted to the maintenance of his family while he is in prison, it was contended, much suffering would be averted. Equally important is the fact that the man himself, knowing his family to be provided for, would be in a much better frame of mind while in prison and more amenable to measures for his correction. Among the advocates of such an arrangement was Hugh Frazer, general organizer for the American Federation of Labor, who saw nothing in the proposal objectionable to organized labor. Mr. Frazer also favored a full union rate of pay to prisoners.

OBJECT MATRIMONY

By Lowell Otus Reese

"LOOKS good to us; hey, Pup?" Big Johnny Purner left the eternal wilderness of sage and greasewood and started the patient burro up the one sandy street of Chuckawalla. The town, built of rude, unplanned boards, was a typical desert affair, but by contrast with the raw desert it was a collection of palaces. "Looks good to us, after a whole month on the desert, hey, Pup?"

Pup cocked his ears and looked up sideways, trotting along beside his master. Desert or town, it was all the same to Pup—so long as he was with Johnny Purner. He wagged his tail at the observation, however, and agreed with Johnny that it looked good.

Few men appeared upon the street, for the male population of Chuckawalla was mainly up on the burro, working hard. On the covered porch of the Happy Jack saloon, however, Smith Garrett lounged, smoking a cigarette. He was a big man, too—as big as Johnny Purner; but he was carefully dressed, his face smoothly shaved and his hands white and well kept. Patently he was unused to manual labor. Out of his big smooth face his china blue eyes looked innocently upon the world.

Now the casual stranger never would know that this innocent look was not indigenous to the man's face, but was a thing carefully cultivated; one of Garrett's properties, used to beguile the unwary. For, though it was not well known in the little desert mining town of Chuckawalla, Smith Garrett was a confidence man.

Johnny Purner trudged slowly up to the hitching rack in front of the Happy Jack. The burro stopped and went to sleep. Johnny looked up, wiping his face with a big red bandana handkerchief. His countenance was covered with a month's stubble; moreover, water had been scarce along the young man's line of travel; his hair was long and heavy under the wide black hat affected by the valley ranchmen. "Hello!" he said, and smiled a friendly smile.

"Hello!" said Garrett. He appraised the stranger swiftly. It was his business to appraise men swiftly. "Come in and have a drink!"

"Thanks!" said Johnny gratefully. "I been traveling round over the desert for a whole month, drinking alkali water, and a glass of lemonade sure would go fine!"

"Prospector?" Garrett smiled in turn. The casual stranger would have seen frank friendliness in the smile. But the closer observer would have detected lurking behind it the vulpine soul, evil, calculating, the soul of a beast of prey.

"No, not a reg'lar prospector. I've only been on the desert a month. I been ranchin' most of my life, down in the Santa Clara Valley. But Pup and me we got tired of it and sold out and came into the desert to see if we could get rich." Garrett took the stranger inside the saloon. Old Laramie Jack mopped the bar as the two approached. His gaze was inscrutable as it flashed upon the stranger, diffidently approaching the bar; but when it changed to Smith Garrett, the close observer once more would have seen a change. For, instinctively, old Laramie Jack did not like Garrett.

"A month out there in the sagebrush," Johnny Purner said, when later he and his new friend sat resting at one of the card tables. "After a month of that I found that I wasn't goin' to get rich if I depended on finding gold myself. I don't know what gold ore looks like. So I thought I'd come to Chuckawalla and try to get a claim that had ore on it—already discovered. Know anybody that's got a good claim to sell?"

Garrett's china blue eyes viewed the slow, credulous ranchman and the man knew at a glance that it was not a question of how to acquire this honest countryman's money; it was merely a question of how to acquire it with the minimum of exertion.

"I have a claim," he said. "I wouldn't sell it, but I got in early and took more land than I can possibly handle."

It was indeed easy to get poor Johnny Purner's money. The claim which Garrett unloaded upon his victim was one which to the experienced eye seemed valuable only as a pasture for horned toads and striped lizards. But Purner did not know. Smith Garrett extolled the wonderful possibilities of this unpromising piece of ground until honest, simple Johnny Purner could almost see solid gold boulders rolling down the slope. In the end he paid Garrett $500 for the property, relying entirely upon Garrett's word.

To the confidence man this was a great joke. That any man should pay out real money on the strength of any other man's word! He boasted of it all over Chuckawalla, laughing until his china blue eyes filled with tears.

But his appreciation of the jest dwindled remarkably when, three months later, Johnny Purner, laboring unscientifically but patiently and with the great and abiding hope of the tenderfoot, broke through a 10-foot iron cap and exposed the ledge which started the historic rush for the mining district of Chuckawalla. To the old timers it did not seem possible. But the thing had happened. Purner had had the proverbial tenderfoot's luck.

And now the whole camp heard Garrett's wail of outraged innocence. "A fool for luck!" he complained bitterly over the bar at Laramie Jack's place. "Ain't I right? Here I own this claim for a whole year—and nothing happens! Then along comes this poor nut Purner—and now the claim's

"You poor, innocent child!" said Judge Barber. "But he did not remove his hobnailed boots from the desk, nor did he even shift his cob pipe, but continued to watch Garrett with sardonic eyes."

"I've been done, Judge!" began Garrett. "You poor, innocent child!" said Judge Barber; but he did not remove his hobnailed boots from the desk, nor did he even shift the cob pipe, but continued to watch Garrett with sardonic old eyes.

"This Purner chap," went on Garrett. "He's robbed me!" "Let's hang him!" grinned Judge Barber through the smoke. The visitor went on to relate the whole matter. But in the end Judge Barber still remained unmoved.

"Bona fide sale, wasn't it?" he asked, half smiling his eyes, still watching through the smoke. "Well, yet; but, Judge, that claim is worth fifteen or twenty thousand dollars just as she lays. A year's development and way it looks now worth $20,000 if it's worth a plugged jitney!" "You didn't work it none, did you?" hinted old Laramie Jack delicately. "Maybe if you'd worked it—"

"I was too busy!" said Garrett. "Anyway, it ain't right. I leave it to you, $500 for a claim like that is robbery! I leave it to anybody."

"I reckon a sale's a sale," pronounced old Uncle Jason Applegate. "And this Purner feller has been hangin' on, working like a slave."

Plainly there was no sympathy here. Garrett hurried over to Judge Barber's office. He found the aged jurist with his mighty frame slumped down in a chair, hobnailed feet upon his desk. He was smoking a blackened cob pipe and as Smith Garrett entered the deep-set old eyes narrowed, watching through the smoke.

More Children Need Free Milk and Ice This Year

"Ice Lady," After 10 Years of Work With the Poor Hopes to Accomplish Much This Summer.

"NEVER before in the history of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund work has the need been so great for funds to give relief to the little ones in the crowded tenement districts," affirmed Mrs. L. E. Melick, who has just rounded out her tenth year as supervisor of the distribution of the ice purchased with Milk and Ice Fund money. Continual contact with the hundreds of families which are supplied with ice during the summer months gives her the right to speak authoritatively.

"More families are asking assistance this season than ever before," she continued, "partly the result of the terrible influenza epidemic which raged the last two winters and taken the principal breadwinner of many homes; and also due to increased living costs which are working untold hardships among the poorer classes of the city. Those who live literally from 'hand-to-mouth' are affected by every fluctuation in the price of foodstuffs and necessities, including coal and ice, for they do not possess sufficient means to enable them to store up even a small reserve supply when prices are low."

"While there are a few crippled aged men and women who have received of the fund's bounty for several successive years, we have comparatively few 'repeat' cases. Each year the work reaches a new group, not the isolated would-be charity class, but the class of poor, hard-working people that misfortune and reverses have temporarily put in real need. They are not the kind who think the world owes them a living—in fact, most of them say when I make the necessary investigation: 'Now if there is anybody that needs the ice worse than I, give it to them—maybe I can get along.' In most instances when fortune smiles on them again their first impulse is to do something to help the fund, and there are unnumbered cases on record where they have given substantial assistance. I have in mind a little 8-year-old girl who, last year, conducted a lemonade stand and earned several dollars. When a tiny baby her parents were in very poor circumstances, and during one hot summer the little one was raised on Post-Dispatch milk, kept by Post-Dispatch ice. Her parents felt they owed her life to the work of the organization, and she was taught as she grew older that she must never forget it."

Mrs. Melick keeps a very complete card index system covering in detail all the families under her care. She has an elaborate system of cross-indexing which prevents any possibility of duplication and she knows exactly from day to day, and year to year, just who receives the ice and why they receive it.

"I cannot begin to express my appreciation of the co-operation given me by the various charitable organizations of the city," she said, "through their efforts many cases are called to my attention that might otherwise be overlooked, and I feel that a certain amount of the credit for my efficient administration of the ice belongs to those organizations."

"I have made many devoted friends in my work—there are many who know me only as the 'Ice Lady' and I have long since become accustomed to that form of salutation at most any time or place. I thoroughly enjoy my work and hope to see a record fund raised during this, my eleventh year, raised during this, my eleventh year, about the size of a walnut. Shape into a loaf and press. HOME ECONOMICS

By Mrs. Elizabeth Kent.

BED TIME.

THE old adage, "early to bed, and early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise," should be the mother's motto for her children. Children not only need plenty of sleep, they need it at the right time of night. Their delicate nervous systems suffer from artificial light. No day time nap really makes up to them for the hours spent awake in an evening, for instance, at the movies. Those hours are terrible hours for a little child, taxing all his immature senses, his sight, his hearing, his touch, uncomfortably held or seated in a crowd, his smell, afflicted with powder and perfumes, and human odors of sorts, and during the few years of childhood, so soon gone forever, a mother must sacrifice her pleasure to her child's well-being. It pays her, then, and later.

The state of mind and body in which a child goes to his sleep is very important. The last waking sensations haunt sleep, and while apparently forgotten next day, go on silently and invisibly creating that part of the individual, which we call the subconscious, determining also the quality of his sleep, and reacting upon the bodily functions.

Great excitement of any kind, sorrow, anger, fear, even joy, or any other intense feeling is very bad at bed time. Children should come to their rest, clean and quiet, in body and spirit. Then the great recuperative forces of the body can work to their full value in the little frames, so relaxed and lovely in the peace of sleep.

"Prayers, lovin'-time, and water—then one story, anyhow," was the slogan of a child I knew. And for her mother, as well as for her, it carries a happier memory now than any pleasure she might have had at the cost of her child's right to be asleep during the early evening hours.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Peter Rabbit Gets a Wetting.

"Look before you leap," we're told, a saying wise and tried and old. Think before you jump, I say. You may not jump at all that way.

PETER RABBIT had eyes for just one thing, the tail of Paddy the Beaver. He couldn't keep them off it. You know Peter has such a funny little tail of his own that he never has been quite sure whether it is a part of himself or not. So he always is comparing it with the tails of his friends. Old Mother Nature noticed how Peter was staring. "Well, what have you on your mind now, Peter?" she asked.

"That tail," replied Peter. "I've seen a lot of queer tails, but that one is the queerest ever. I should think it would be heavy and dreadfully in the way."

"If you ask him, Paddy will tell you that that is the handiest tail in all the Green Forest," said she. "Isn't that so, Paddy?"

Paddy nodded. "It certainly is," said he. "I couldn't get along without it."

"There isn't another like it in all the Great World," continued Old Mother Nature, "and if you'll be patient you will see just how handy it is."

It was a queer looking tail. There was no denying that. It was broad and thick and flat, oval in shape and covered with scales instead of hair. Somehow Peter couldn't make it seem like a tail at all. Just then Juniper the Hare made a discovery. "Why!" he exclaimed. "Why! Paddy has feet like Honker the Goose!"

"They have webs between the toes just as Honker's have. I suppose that is what you mean. That is for swimming. But there are no webs between my fingers." He held up a hand for all to see. Sure enough, there were no webs between the fingers. They were entirely free.

"Now that everybody has had a good look at you, Paddy, suppose you swim over to where you have been cutting trees. We will join you there and then you can show us what kind of a lumberman you are," said Old Mother Nature.

Paddy slipped into the water. There for a minute or two he floated with just his head above the surface. Then without warning he lifted his broad, heavy tail and brought it down on the surface of the water with a slap that sounded like the crack of a terrible gun. It was so loud and unexpected that everyone but Old Mother Nature and Prickly Porky jumped with fright. Peter Rabbit happened to be sitting right on the edge of the dam facing the pond. He didn't stop to think. He just jumped. Of course there was no where for him to jump but in the pond, and that is just what he did. He landed in the water with a great splash. Now, Peter doesn't like the water, as you know, and you may be sure he scrambled out just as fast as ever he could. How the others did laugh.

"What did he do that for?" demanded Peter indignantly.

"To show you one use he has for that handy tail," replied Old Mother Nature. "That is the way he gives warning to his friends whenever he discovers danger. Did you notice how he uses his tail when swimming? He turns it on edge and uses it for a rudder and sometimes when he is in a hurry he sculls with it a little. Those big webbed hind feet are the paddles which drive him through the water. He can stay under water as much as five minutes. See, he has just come up now."

Sure enough, Paddy, who had dived when he hit the water with his tail, had just appeared 'way across the pond, almost on the other side, and was now swimming on the surface.

"We'll go around there," said Old Mother Nature. "You can get dry on the way, Peter." She at once led the way.

As a Woman Thinketh

By Helen Rowland

I Sigh to Be a "Lady."

ALL my life, I have yearned to be a "lady."

Oh, dear, no! I don't mean merely "well-bred,"

Or fashionable, or "smart," or "modish," or "chic," or polished."

I mean a "lady" in the sweet, old, roocco, 1860 sense—

The sort that reminds one of lavender, and lilacs, and old lace.

And has "charming MANNERS," and a "gracious" smile, and a "queenly" presence, and soft, white hands and illusions and dignity and reserve—

And all those things, so fascinating—to MEN!

I wish I could "greet" my friends, instead of just hailing them.

I wish I could "sweep" into a room, instead of just breezing in.

I wish I could "glide" about, instead of rushing about.

And could "preside" at a dinner, instead of merely "entertaining."

And had a "vocabulary," instead of a just a jargon of slang and popular idioms, and musical comedy "lingo."

I wish I could be "polite" in crowded street cars, and "courteous" in a mob, and could do the "After-you-my-dear-Alphonse"—oh, there I go!

But, alas, I'm Today's Daughter! And I must do as Today's Daughters do.

Bring me the rouge-pot, and anoint me with brilliantine and patchouli! Cover me with pearl-powder, and array me in my backless evening gown!

Fill out my eyebrows and let my finger nails shine like unto electric lights! Do me up in Paradise feathers and deck me in near-pearl earrings. For, if I disdain these things—then shall I blush unseen and forgotten.

In a world of dazzling women. Where a matron must outshine her granddaughter, a debutante must outdress a showgirl.

And you cannot tell a working girl from a society bud, nor a society bud from a Broadway star! Heigh-ho! It takes TIME to be a "lady!"

And we're all too busy—we Daughters of Today—trying to be dazzling, or smart, or chic, or original, or stunning—

Too busy banting, and massaging, and marcelling, and golfing, and motoring, and keeping up with the very "latest word," the very "latest wrinkle!"

To bother about "MANNERS," or etiquette (funny old word!).

Or ANYTHING—except using the right beauty cream, and the right fork.

And yet, there is nothing so attractive to men, in all the world, As a "lady!"

Oh, yes, I sigh to be a "lady!" But, I'm Today's Daughter.

And I dwell in the eternal fear of being "twenty minutes late!"

I WANT to be a "lady."

But I haven't the TIME!

Addition To Beverly Hills The One Best Buy

St. Louis real estate is the one best investment on the market today. Our city is growing as a manufacturing center. It is recognized as the best distribution point for manufactured goods in the United States.

Hundreds of new factories are locating here, bringing thousands of highly paid skilled workmen. These workers must have homes. Our city is now underbuilt.

If you want to make big money buy St. Louis real estate in the path of the city's residential development.

Buy west of the new Natural Bridge road industrial district.

Your Opportunity

We have opened an addition of 99 acres to Beverly Hills immediately adjoining that property on the south. The property is at the intersection of Natural Bridge and Lucas and Hunt roads.

This is a big block of real estate, but it will not long remain on the market. Early buyers will be given an opportunity to make big profits. Prices will soon be advanced.

You can double your money if you are a live wire and act promptly. Early buyers in this addition get the choice of location.

This is well worth your immediate attention.

Beverly Hills is on two car lines, 45 minutes from Broadway.

How To Get There

Our automobiles will meet you at our branch offices at Weilton or at Union and Natural Bridge road and take you direct to the property.

For plans and additional information call at our branch office, 111 Locust Street, or phone Olive 2841.

COALITION TO BE IN MINORITY IN NEW REICHSTAG

Independent Socialists Elect
80 Members and Majority
Wing 110 — 250,000
Votes Cast.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 9.—Unofficial reports from Sunday's election show that the Majority Socialists, Centrists and Democrats, who, by combining, dominated the last session of the German Parliament, will be in the minority in the new Reichstag.

These parties, according to indications, have 222 seats, while the seats of other parties total 238.

Latest figures show that 25,719,000 votes were polled during the election. But that the seats will be apportioned as follows: Majority Socialists, 110; Centrists, 67;

Democrats, 45; Christian Federal-ists, 21; German Nationalists, 65;

German People's Party, 61; Independent Socialists, 80; Communists,

2; Bavarian Peasants' Party, 4;

Guelphists, 5.

Three Berlin editors have been elected. They are Otto Hoetzsch of the Kreuz Zeitung, Reinhold Wulfo of the Pan Germanic and Anti-Semitic Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, both members of the German

National Party, and Heinrich Rippler of the Tagliche Rundschau, a candidate of the German People's party.
